B. DEMURRER.—1. Generally.—Subject to the general principles elsewhere treated,<sup>66</sup> the general rule is that a supplemental pleading may be tested by demurrer,<sup>67</sup> except where demurrer has been abolished.<sup>68</sup> However, some courts have said that a demurrer cannot be interposed to a supplemental pleading alone since it is not an independent pleading but must be considered in connection with and as a part of the original pleading.<sup>69</sup> Thus a demurrer cannot be interposed

But see Eckert v. Binkley, 134 Ind. 614, 33 N. E. 619, 34 N. E. 441 (distinguishing earlier Indiana cases above cited, and holding proper a demurrer to a supplemental answer setting up a distinct defense, as a means of testing the sufficiency of that defense); Stearns v. Lichtenberger, 48 App. Div. 498, 62 N. Y. Supp. 949, a demurrer will lie to a supplemental complaint when intended as a substitute for and to supersede the original complaint.

[a] The rule which forbids the filing of a demurrer to a supplemental pleading results from the general rule that a demurrer will not lie to a part to a supplemental complaint under the code on the ground that it fails to state a cause of action, since it is not intended to embody a complete cause of action.<sup>70</sup> However, in equity, a supplemental bill may be demurred to,<sup>71</sup> and, in some code states, so may a supplemental complaint on grounds going to the propriety of the supplemental matter.<sup>72</sup>

A supplemental answer attempting to set up a new and independent defense may be demurred to as not constituting a defense,<sup>73</sup> or, it seems, as not a proper matter for a supplemental pleading.<sup>74</sup>

Where the supplemental pleading restates the original,<sup>75</sup> a demurrer may of course be interposed to the supplemental pleading.<sup>76</sup>

On demurrer to the original and supplemental bill or complaint the two may be considered together for the purpose of showing no equity or cause of action.<sup>77</sup> But the latter cannot be considered for the purpose of a pleading. Farris v. Jones, 112 Ind. 498, 14 N. E. 484.

of supplying vital defects in the former.<sup>78</sup>

2. Grounds of Demurrer.—Where a demurrer is proper it may be based on the ground of lack of equity,<sup>79</sup> or because the matter set forth in the supplemental pleading is not properly supplemental,<sup>80</sup> as where it is an attempt to supply fundamental deficiencies in the original pleading,<sup>81</sup> or to state a new case or cause of action,<sup>82</sup> or the matters charged in the supplemental pleading arose before the filing of the original pleadings,<sup>83</sup> and on various other grounds for which a demurrer usually lies.<sup>84</sup> Demurrer is proper where laches appears from the allegations of the supplemental pleading,<sup>85</sup> but objection that a supplemental pleading was filed without leave is not a matter for demurrer,<sup>86</sup> and a demurrer will be considered as a waiver of such supplemental sets up subsequent facts rendering certain parties no longer necessary.

irregularity.<sup>87</sup> In case of a supplemental answer, failure to state a ground of defense may be ground for demurrer.<sup>88</sup>

C. WAIVER OF OBJECTIONS.—The right to demur is not waived by answering the original pleading subsequent to the filing of a supplemental pleading of which there was no notice,<sup>89</sup> but objection to a supplemental pleading on the ground of want of notice is waived by demurring without assigning that as a reason.<sup>90</sup> If the supplemental pleading is answered and the case is contested upon the merits it cannot be insisted for the first time on appeal that the supplemental pleading was improperly filed;<sup>91</sup> and waiver of the right to object results also when the parties who might properly have objected that the facts set up in a non-supplementary pleading should have been set up by means of a supplemental pleading, or vice versa, appear and contest the case on its merits without proper and timely objection.<sup>92</sup> Objection

See also Bank of Kentucky v. Schuylkill Bank, 1 Pars. Eq. Cas. (Pa.) 180, 218, failure to demur on this ground or to make the objection in the answer, is a waiver.

[b] Hearing Before Master as Waiver.—Where by consent of parties a cause as set out in a bill and supplemental bill is sent to a master and is fully heard upon its merits, the objection that the suit is sought to be maintained upon facts occurring since the filing of the original bill is waived where there is a failure to demur to it upon that ground. *Pinch v. [a] As to new note of issue or no-

the issues raised by the two pleadings are so interdependent as to require a new trial of all the issues.<sup>15</sup> In the case of a supplemental answer, if it appears upon the hearing that the defendant is entitled to a judgment against the plaintiff it should be rendered in his favor.<sup>16</sup>

XII. APPEAL AND ERROR.—If there is an abuse of discretion in granting or refusing leave to file supplemental pleadings the action of the court may be assigned as error and reviewed upon appeal.<sup>17</sup> However, the higher courts are inclined to leave unquestioned the right of the lower court to grant or refuse leave to file supplemental pleadings, and abuse of discretion must be affirmatively shown to exist and to be prejudicial to the rights of the complainant or the decision of the lower court will not be disturbed upon this ground upon appeal.<sup>18</sup>

[a] Necessity for Exceptions.—(1) It has been held that an order refusing leave cannot be reviewed upon appeal unless incorporated in the bill of exceptions. Giddings v. Seventy-Six Land & Water Co., 109 Cal. 116, 41 Pac. 788. (2) On the other hand, it has been decided that such an order if embodied in a written order and journal entry is a self-excepting order, and no formal exception is necessary to make the order reviewable on appeal. Burnett v. Ewing, 39 Wash. 45, 80 Pac. 855. (3) Nor for purpose of reviewing court's action in striking supplemental pleading out, is it necessary that the pleading be preserved by a bill of exceptions as it is still a part of the record, although for the purpose of pleading it treated as excluded therefrom. The clerk should incorporate it in the transcript. Henry v. Montezuma Water & Land Co., 55 Colo. 182, 133 Pac. 747. (4) But where leave to file a supplemental pleading is refused, it cannot be considered on appeal though actually filed with the clerk and by him embodied in the judgment roll. Wood v. Ohmen, 75 Cal. 558, 17 Pac. 687, "conceding that the court erred in permitting the supplemental complaint to be filed, still we are unable to see that defendant was prejudiced." No reversal. Ill.—Turner v. Berry, 8 Ill. 541. Ind.—Louisville, N. A. & C. Ry. Co. v. Hubbard, 116 Ind. 193, 18 N. E. 611. Kan.—Alexander v. Clarkson, 96 Kan. 174, 150 Pac. 576; Clark v. Spencer, 14 Kan. 398, 19 Am. Rep. 96. In Smith v. Fullinwider, 40 Kan. 73, 19 Pac. 314, it was said that there is no ground for error unless it affirmatively appears that the lower court was guilty of a "flagrant" abuse of discretion. Ky.—Aylor v. Aylor, 158 Ky. 713, 166 S. W. 216. Mont.—Nichols v. Williams, 38 Mont. 552, 100 Pac. 969. N. Y.—Spears

The trial court is in a better position to know the facts and circumstances of the case and its refusal to grant leave will be presumed to be upon mature deliberation.<sup>19</sup> It devolves upon the party who assails the action of the court to show affirmatively that there was an abuse of discretion.<sup>20</sup> Such abuse is sufficiently shown if it appears that a defense or ground of action going to the merits of the case is shut out by the court's order.<sup>21</sup> If the action of the lower court is controlled by some error of law reversal will result,<sup>22</sup> unless such error is not deemed prejudicial.<sup>23</sup>

cution defendant is a necessary party to proceedings for the examination of his debtor.<sup>50</sup> New parties may under some statutes be brought into supplementary proceedings,<sup>51</sup> and all known adverse claimants to a fund sought to be reached should have an opportunity to be heard.<sup>52</sup>

VIII. PROCEEDINGS TO PROCURE EXAMINATION.—A. GENERALLY.—Statutes relating to supplementary proceedings are strictly construed,<sup>53</sup> and conformity with them is necessary to secure the benefit of the proceedings.<sup>54</sup> No formal pleadings or framing of issues are contemplated,<sup>55</sup> but where the statute is silent as to the practice, and the proceeding is regarded as a civil action, the general rules of procedure have been held to apply.<sup>56</sup>

B. SHOWING AND AFFIDAVIT.—1. Generally.—Before an order may be made for supplementary proceedings the statutes require a showing of the essential prerequisites, usually by affidavit.<sup>57</sup> The particularity required in averments in pleadings is not required in the affidavit.<sup>58</sup> Alternative allegations are bad,<sup>59</sup> but surplusage does not vitiate.<sup>60</sup> If the affidavit is on information and belief, the name of the informant with his means of knowledge must be stated.<sup>61</sup>

than the judgment creditor institutes the proceedings, his right to do so must be stated.<sup>68</sup> It is not necessary to state that no previous application was made.<sup>69</sup>

Showing That Debtor Has Property. — Where the execution is returned unsatisfied in whole or part, a showing that the debtor has property which he refuses to apply to the satisfaction of the debt is not required.<sup>70</sup> Where the execution has not been returned, the statutes require a showing that the debtor has property which he unjustly refuses to apply to the satisfaction of the judgment.<sup>71</sup>

That a demand was made is sometimes required to show unjust refusal to apply property to the satisfaction of the judgment,<sup>72</sup> but it is not necessary where there is a return of execution unsatisfied.<sup>73</sup>

3. For Examination of Third Person. — An affidavit for examination of a third person must show either that he has property of the judgment debtor,<sup>74</sup> or that he is indebted to him in an amount exceeding the statutory amount,<sup>75</sup> as well as the fact of issuance of an execution to the sheriff of the proper county.<sup>76</sup> But it need not allege that the debtor unjustly refuses to apply the property or debt sought to be reached.<sup>77</sup>

4. Filing of Affidavit.—The affidavit should be filed before presentation to the judge for an order of examination.<sup>78</sup>

5. Amendment.—The plaintiff's affidavit or verified complaint may be amended.<sup>79</sup>

C. NOTICE.—Notice to the debtor of an application for an order of his examination is not required,<sup>80</sup> but where a third person is to be examined, the judge may in his discretion require notice of subsequent proceedings to be given the debtor.<sup>81</sup>

D. ORDER FOR EXAMINATION.—1. Generally.—An order of examination is a matter of right on a proper and sufficient showing.<sup>82</sup> An order for the examination of the debtor is not a prerequisite to an order to examine his debtors.<sup>83</sup>

2. Form of Order.<sup>84</sup>—The order for examination must require the debtor to answer concerning his property,<sup>85</sup> before the judge to whom

XI. DISMISSAL AND DISCONTINUANCE.—Supplementary proceedings may be dismissed or discontinued by order of the judge on application of a party.<sup>5</sup>

XII. ABATEMENT.—It has been held that supplementary proceedings, though instituted during the life of a judgment, abate when the judgment ceases to have vitality.<sup>6</sup> Under some statutes, the proceedings do not abate on the death of a party.<sup>7</sup>

XIII. SIMULTANEOUS AND SUCCESSIVE PROCEEDINGS. Simultaneous supplementary proceedings may be instituted against a debtor by different creditors,<sup>8</sup> and an examination by one creditor does not preclude examinations by other creditors.<sup>9</sup> The proceedings may be maintained contemporaneously with a suit in equity to subject the debtor's property to the judgment or a creditor's suit,<sup>10</sup> or with proceedings under a second execution.<sup>11</sup>

XIV. EXAMINATION AND SECOND EXAMINATION.—A default cannot be entered but the debtor or other persons must be examined.<sup>12</sup> The debtor is not entitled to a jury trial,<sup>13</sup> except, perhaps, where the statute permits of and issues of fact are framed;<sup>14</sup> but persons examined may be allowed the aid of counsel.<sup>15</sup> The examination is taken orally,<sup>16</sup> and errors and mistakes in the testimony may be corrected.<sup>17</sup>

No right to inquire into disputed title, see supra, XIV.

[a] Not Substantially Disputed. Under some statutes such order can be made only when the judgment debtor's right to possession of the money or property "is not substantially disputed." If there is a real controversy in this respect, it cannot be settled in supplementary proceedings, but must of the debt due.<sup>44</sup> If the third person holding the property claims an interest adverse to the debtor,<sup>45</sup> or the third party garnished, denies his indebtedness,<sup>46</sup> a surrender of the property cannot be ordered unless the claim or denial is merely simulated.<sup>47</sup> In case of such claim or denial the remedy is by other appropriate, legal or equitable remedy.<sup>48</sup>

The court or judge who granted the original order,<sup>49</sup> or to whom it was returnable,<sup>50</sup> may make the order of surrender of the property.

Notice. — The order may be made without notice,<sup>51</sup> or on such notice as the judge deems just.<sup>52</sup> If third persons have an interest in the property, notice to them should be given.<sup>53</sup>

Form of Order. — The order should direct the application of the property to the satisfaction of the judgment,<sup>54</sup> or under some statutes direct the payment of the money or delivery of personalty to the officer

[a] At the instance of the third person ordered to surrender. Kantor Bros. v. Wile, 93 Misc. 438, 158 N. Y. Supp. 115.

Effect and Enforcement of Order.—An order made in supplementary proceedings directing the application of property discovered to the satisfaction of a judgment is a final determination of the rights of the parties in the proceedings. It, in effect constitutes a judgment,<sup>64</sup> not collaterally attackable,<sup>65</sup> on which an execution might be issued<sup>66</sup> and from which an appeal might be taken.<sup>67</sup> But it does not bar a subsequent proceeding for recovery of other property since acquired or not involved in the first,<sup>68</sup> nor is it binding on other creditors not parties.<sup>69</sup> So far as the judgment debtor is concerned the order may be enforced by contempt proceedings against him.<sup>70</sup> But it has been held that an order requiring third persons to deliver property of the debtor cannot be enforced by contempt proceedings,<sup>71</sup> but must be enforced by execution,<sup>72</sup> garnishment,<sup>73</sup> or equitable proceedings.<sup>74</sup> of such an allegation is held by some authorities not to raise an issue of fact,<sup>50</sup> but some courts hold otherwise.<sup>51</sup> It has been held that such a traverse should not be stricken out, however.<sup>52</sup>

VII. REMEDIES.—A. SCANDAL AND IMPERTINENCE. — Courts of equity have inherent power to strike out scandalous or impertinent matter in pleadings on their own motion,<sup>53</sup> or at the instance of a party.<sup>54</sup> But this is a power which should be sparingly exercised,<sup>55</sup> and will not be exercised except in a clear case,<sup>56</sup> and when the pleading will not be vitiated thereby.<sup>57</sup> The entire pleading should not be stricken out for scandal or impertinence,<sup>58</sup> unless the scandalous matter is so blended with proper matter as to be incapable of separation.<sup>59</sup>

Persons not parties to the action may, it has been held, have scandalous matter stricken from pleadings.<sup>60</sup>

I. AFTER DEATH OF PARTIES. — A. SURVIVAL OF ACTION AND OF CAUSE OF ACTION DISTINGUISHED. — The survival of a cause of action on which a suit is based is to be distinguished from the survival of an action pending at the time of the death of a party,<sup>1</sup> and statutes regulating the latter have no application to the former,<sup>2</sup> which, in the absence of the statutory provision, must necessarily be determined by the common law.<sup>3</sup>

B. SURVIVAL OF CAUSES OF ACTION GENERALLY. — 1. At Common Law. — At common law, in general, rights of action for the breach of a contract survive upon the death of either party, to and against the personal representative of each.<sup>4</sup> In accordance with the maxim actio personalis moritur cum persona, rights of action for torts, did not survive at early common law when the action must be in form ex delicto for the recovery of damages and when the plea must be not guilty.<sup>5</sup> But if the tort could be waived, and an action of assumpsit brought, the right of action survived.<sup>6</sup> This early rule of the common law was changed by the statutes of 4 and 31, Edward III, giving to executors and administrators an action de bonis asportatis to recover the value of property taken from their decedents. This statute was not limited to injuries to specific articles of personal property, but extended to all wrongs by which the personal estate of the deceased was injured or diminished in value, whether or not it was actually removed or destroyed. However, it related only to personal property and to rights of action in favor of the personal representative of the party injured.<sup>7</sup> Though the cause of action survive, no action would lie against the executor where the plea is, that the testator was not guilty. The action must be maintained in a different form.<sup>8</sup> The law was further changed in England by the statute of 3 and 4 William IV., by which actions of trespass and trespass on the case could be brought by and against executors and administrators for wrongs to the personal or real estate.<sup>9</sup> These statutes made no change in the common law as to cases of injury to the person.<sup>10</sup>

[a] The word "actio" means both the proceeding to enforce the right

2. In the United States.—a. Generally.—The tendency of the United States is to limit the application of the rule of "actio personalis."<sup>11</sup> The matter is generally regulated by statutes which vary from a general survival statute,<sup>12</sup> to statutes simply reenacting the old English statutes.<sup>13</sup> Where the statute is silent as to the survivability of a cause of action, resort must be had to the common law to determine its survivability.<sup>14</sup> The statute of Edward III, is generally regarded as part of the common law.<sup>15</sup> The statute of William IV, does not af-and the right itself. Wynn v. Tallapoosa Co. Bank, 168 Ala. 469, 490, 53 So. 228. See generally the title "Suits and Actions."

fect the common law as received in this country,<sup>16</sup> but its provisions are generally incorporated in the survival statutes.<sup>17</sup> In some states by statute none of the English statutes are in force.<sup>18</sup>

b. In Federal Courts.—Congress has not prescribed what actions survive, and the federal courts will follow the law of the state in which the action arose, or in the absence of some special legislation, the common law.<sup>19</sup> And where the cause of action is created by a federal statute, the common-law rules are applied.<sup>20</sup>

3. Tests of Survivorship.—a. Nature and Form of Action. The rule as to survival of causes of action is often stated as though the form of action were a test of survivability, the statement being that causes of action ex contractu survive whereas those ex delicto do not.<sup>21</sup> This rule although true as a general proposition is not absolutely true.<sup>22</sup> The true test is the nature of the cause of action or the nature of the damage sued for, rather than the form of action,<sup>23</sup> the distinction being between those causes of action which affect the estate, and those which affect the person only.<sup>24</sup>

[a] For cases construing statutes,

some courts construe them strictly.<sup>30</sup> A statute authorizing the bringing of an action "against" the personal representative has been held to authorize the bringing of such action "by" the representative, although the statute did not contain a specific provision to that effect.<sup>31</sup>

C. SURVIVAL OF PENDING ACTIONS GENERALLY. — 1. On Death of Sole Plaintiff or Defendant. — a. At Common Law. — In England at one time, all actions abated on the death of either sole party thereto, and could not be revived for or against the personal representative. If the cause of action survived it was necessary to bring a new action.<sup>32</sup> This was changed by statute in those cases where a party died after verdict and after interlocutory judgment.<sup>33</sup> The common law of England as thus changed, forms the common law of some of the American states.<sup>34</sup>

b. In Equity. — Suits in equity abate by the death of a party.<sup>35</sup> But the abatement is not, as at common law, a complete overthrow of the action. It is only a suspension of the suit for want of proper parties until it is revived by bringing them in.<sup>36</sup> see the following: U. S.—Gerling v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., 151 U. S. 673, 14 Sup. Ct. 533, 38 L. ed. 311, construing statute of West Virginia. W. Va. Cunningham v. Sayre, 21 W. [b] A statute providing that "causes of action upon which suit has been or may hereafter be brought" survive simply extends the right of survival to suits brought under the section and pending at the time of its enactment and to causes of action upon which suit may be brought thereafter. It does not limit the right of survival to suits pending at the death of a party. Kohnle v. Paxton, 268 Mo. 463, 188 S. W. 155, overruling Showen v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., 164 Mo. App. 41, 148 S. c. Under Statute.—Statutes generally provide that no action, whether legal or equitable, shall abate by the death of a party if the cause of action survive or continue.<sup>37</sup> Under this and similar statutes, the rule of equity as to suspension of the suit by death of a party has been made the rule of law courts, where the cause of action survives.<sup>38</sup> This suspension has the same temporary effect on the rights of the parties as though the suit were actually abated.<sup>39</sup> When the death of a party is brought to the notice of the court, its duty is to stop, whether or not there is a motion to dismiss.<sup>40</sup> All proceedings in the action are suspended,<sup>41</sup> and nothing can be done in the action until it is revived.<sup>42</sup> Any judicial act after the death of a party and before revivor,<sup>43</sup> ex-

Where a party dies pending an appeal in the nature of a writ of error, the effect of the death depends upon whether the judgment is in favor of the plaintiff or defendant, since if it is in favor of the former, the cause of action, though it would otherwise abate by death, is merged in the judgment, which operates to prevent<sup>94</sup> any abate-

[b] "The authorities are practically unanimous upon the proposition that although the cause of action is such that it would abate by the death of the plaintiff before judgment, the death of the plaintiff after judgment, and pending disposition of a writ of error or appeal in the nature of a writ of error, will not affect the judgment. As some of the cases say, the original wrong or claim is merged in the judgment which has all the attributes of a judgment in actions ex contractu. After the giving of the judgment, the controversy is over the judgment, and not over the original wrong. The judgment is not annulled during the pendency of such controversy, but simply suspended." Fowden v. Pacific Coast S. S. Co., 149 Cal. 151, 154, 86 Pac. 178.

[c] Where, after a verdict for the plaintiff is set aside and a verdict for the defendant directed, the plaintiff dies pending an appeal by him, the action does not abate, for if on the appeal the action of the trial judge should be reversed, the original verdict in favor of the plaintiff would be reinstated. Schramme v. Lewinson, 123 App. Div. 662, 107 N. Y. Supp.

ment, unless it is subsequently finally set aside or reversed.<sup>95</sup> If, however, the judgment is in favor of the defendant, it has been held that the effect of death pending the appeal would be the same as though it had occurred before judgment; in other words, if the cause of action is one which survives there will be no abatement, but if the cause of action does not survive the proceedings will abate.<sup>96</sup>

Where the effect of an appeal is to vacate and annul the judgment below, as where it results in a trial de novo,<sup>97</sup> the death of a party pending the appeal has the same effect as an abatement as though it had occurred before judgment.<sup>98</sup> And in a divorce suit it has been held that so far as the mere marital status of the parties is concerned the appeal abates, but that so far as the decree may affect property rights the appeal may be continued.<sup>99</sup>

The mere fact that costs have been taxed against a party has been held not to affect the right to continue an appeal, which would otherwise abate by the death of a party.<sup>1</sup>

If the death occurs after submission of the case on appeal, and before decision, judgment may be rendered nunc pro tunc as of the date of submission,<sup>2</sup> when the delay in causing judgment to be entered is purely for the convenience of the court or of some of its members,<sup>3</sup> and in certain other cases where injustice would otherwise result to one or both of the parties of record,<sup>4</sup> provided the judgment thus to be entered can be operative and effective, as a judgment, from the day as of which it is entered.<sup>5</sup> It has been held that this may be done also when the respondent dies before argument, and his death is not known to the appellate court or counsel until after argument and decision.<sup>6</sup>

The matter of survival of appeals is oftentimes affected by statute.<sup>7</sup> Thus some statutes provide in effect that no cause shall abate by the death, pending appeal, of any party to the record.<sup>8</sup> These statutes sometimes, but not always, contain a proviso limiting their applica-

b. Distinction Between Torts Affecting the Person and Property. The line of demarcation separating the causes of actions in tort which survive from those which do not is that in the first case the wrong complained of affects primarily and principally property rights and the injuries to the person are merely incidental, while in the latter, the injury complained of is to the person, and the property and property rights are only incidentally affected.<sup>49</sup> Where the injury to

[a] "On the question of survivorship, we consider it immaterial whether the form of the remedy adopted is in tort or in contract, provided the cause of action is founded on a contract. The form of action brought to redress a wrong, sometimes, and indeed usually, indicates its nature, whether as arising independently of contract or not; but this is far from being invariably so, there being many cases where the action, the cause of which grows out of a breach of contract, may be in form either ex delicto, as in case, or ex contractu, as in assumption. In determining whether a cause of action survives to the personal representative, the real nature of the injury or claim ought to be regarded, and not the form of the remedy by which it is sought to be redressed or enforced." *Booth's Admr. v. special damage to personal estate can be stated,<sup>6</sup> for whatever the form of action, the action is considered virtually one for injuries to the person.<sup>7</sup>

(IV.) Action for Death by Wrongful Act.—An action for death by wrongful act abates on the death of the sole beneficiary unless statute provides otherwise.<sup>8</sup>

(V.) Seduction.—A cause of action for seduction survives under some statutes,<sup>9</sup> but it is otherwise at common law.<sup>10</sup> An action by a father for seduction of the daughter does not survive his death,<sup>11</sup> or the death of the defendant,<sup>12</sup> unless statute so provides.<sup>13</sup>

[a] Reason of Rule.—An action against a physician for malpractice is an injury to the person, and not to the estate of the plaintiff whether the complaint is considered as charging a breach of contract or a breach of duty; and whether it is in form ex contractu or ex delicto. The form of action is not controlling, the controlling consideration is whether or not the cause of action relates to property interests or to personal injuries. It is well settled that a personal representative cannot maintain an action upon a promise, when the damage consists entirely of the personal suffering of the deceased, whether mental or corporal. *Best v. proceedings do not abate on the death of the complaining witness.<sup>21</sup>

25. Bastardy Proceedings.—A bastardy proceeding or a right of action against the putative father for support of a bastard child abates on the death of the father,<sup>22</sup> unless statute otherwise provides.<sup>23</sup> But the death of the mother pendente lite does not abate the proceeding,<sup>24</sup> although the contrary has been held.<sup>25</sup> If the action is brought by an officer, his death does not abate it.<sup>26</sup> The death of the child born alive, pending the proceeding does not abate it,<sup>27</sup> although where the proceedings were commenced before the birth of the child, the action would abate if the child should not be born alive.<sup>28</sup>

33. See infra, this note.

[a] An action against an officer and sureties on his bond for defaults of the officer in the performance of his duties is ex contractu and as such

In accordance with these rules, a cause of action for a false return not benefiting the estate of the officer does not survive his death,<sup>34</sup> unless statute so provides.<sup>35</sup> But, under the statute of 4 Edward III, such action survives the death of the plaintiff, especially upon final process, when the estate of the plaintiff is lessened,<sup>36</sup> although under other statutes, it is held that the cause of action dies with the plaintiff.<sup>37</sup> An action for nonfeasance in failing to make a levy,<sup>38</sup> in not serving in time an attachment and trustee process,<sup>39</sup> in failing to take a sufficient bail bond,<sup>40</sup> or in failing to make a return,<sup>41</sup> as well as for an escape,<sup>42</sup> dies with the wrongdoer unless it is proved that his estate was benefited.<sup>43</sup> But an action for failure to return an execution survives the creditor's death where his estate is lessened.<sup>44</sup> And the same is true as to a cause of action for failure to arrest a debtor upon execution.<sup>45</sup> A cause of action against a tax collector for the recovery of money paid under protest on account of duties, or taxes erroneously or illegally assessed survives the death of the officer at common law.<sup>46</sup>

Summary proceedings against public officers were unknown to the common law, and they cannot be revived against the personal representatives of the officer,<sup>47</sup> unless statute so provides.<sup>48</sup>

Cause of Action for Acts of Deputy.—At common law, a deputy of a sheriff, or other public officer is but the agent of the officer himself. When the deputy is guilty of a misfeasance or nonfeasance, the officer is deemed to be a principal tortfeasor. And therefore on the death of the officer, a cause of action against him arising out of the default of his deputy does not survive if it is one that would not have survived were he the real offender.<sup>49</sup> But where a deputy is not a mere agent of the sheriff but is to a certain extent an independent public officer, and the sheriff is merely a surety rather than a principal tortfeasor, the reason of the maxim actio personalis fails, and the cause of action survives.<sup>50</sup>

When the deputy dies, the rule as to survival of causes of action against his estate is that governing the survival of actions generally on the death of the wrongdoer himself.<sup>51</sup> But the cause of action against the officer for the default of the deputy is not affected by the death of the deputy,<sup>52</sup> even though no action will lie against the personal representative of the latter.<sup>53</sup>

Some statutes provide that actions for malfeasance of a sheriff or his deputy may be brought against the personal representatives of the sheriff.<sup>54</sup>

D. BY INSOLVENCY OR BANKRUPTCY OF PARTY.—Insolvency statutes generally provide that pending actions against the insolvent be held in abeyance pending the insolvency proceedings,<sup>92</sup> and a similar result is provided for by the bankruptcy act.<sup>93</sup> The trustee of the bankrupt may be directed by the court to prosecute or defend pending suits by or against the bankrupt.<sup>94</sup>

III. AFTER MARRIAGE OF FEMALE PARTY.—A. PLAINTIFF.
At Common Law.—At common law the marriage of a female plaintiff abates the suit,<sup>95</sup> unless she becomes a widow before the marriage is pleaded in abatement.<sup>96</sup>

—The marriage of a plaintiff pendente lite abates a bill in equity and it cannot proceed without a revivor,<sup>97</sup> although the marriage occurred after decree.<sup>98</sup>

Under Statute.—Statutes generally provide that actions shall not abate by the marriage of a female plaintiff if the cause of action survive.<sup>99</sup> does not abate on the remarriage of the widow. Wabash R. Co. v. Gret-zinger, 182 Ind. 155, 104 N. E. 69.

[b] An action for breach of promise of marriage cannot be prosecuted after marriage of the plaintiff to the defendant. And counsel cannot continue the action for fees. Harris v.
 Tison, 63 Ga. 629, 36 Am. Rep. 126.

B. DEFENDANT.—The marriage of a female defendant pending an action at common law,<sup>1</sup> or a suit in equity,<sup>2</sup> does not cause an abatement of the action or suit. At common law the suit may proceed against her without noticing the marriage and without making the husband a party.<sup>3</sup> But in equity it is necessary to obtain an order that the suit proceed against the husband and wife.<sup>4</sup>

I. COMPELLING, RESTRAINING AND REVIEWING LEVY.

A. IN GENERAL. — Notwithstanding the fact that the levying of a tax is legislative and administrative in character,<sup>1</sup> it may, under proper

1. See Adams v. Southern R. Co., 9 Ala. App. 201, 62 So. 466, although levied by a body clothed in other mat- | ters with judicial powers and func- | tions. [a] An assessment may be levied circumstances, be compelled by mandamus,<sup>2</sup> or an illegal levy may be restrained by injunction,<sup>3</sup> unless the remedy at law under the particular circumstances of the case is adequate.<sup>4</sup> Certiorari may be employed to review the action of the officer making the levy;<sup>5</sup> but an appeal from the levy will not lie unless expressly authorized by statute.<sup>6</sup> The public necessity or the expediency of levying a tax,<sup>7</sup> or the amount for which a levy shall be made is a matter resting within the discretion of the proper administrative officers, and the exercise of their discretion will not be controlled,<sup>8</sup> except in clear cases of its abuse.<sup>9</sup>

B. MANDAMUS PROCEEDINGS. — Where a public corporation is under the legal duty of raising funds by taxation for the purpose of paying<sup>10</sup> upon property in the hands of a receiver without first obtaining the consent of the court by whom the receiver was appointed. Coy v. Title Guarantee & Trust Co., 212 Fed. 520.

2. See infra, I, B.

3. Ga.—Schwarz v. National Packing Co., 122 Ga. 533, 50 S. E. 494. Kan.—Andrews v. Love, 46 Kan. 264, 26 Pac. 746, proceedings for the levy must have been actually instituted. Md.—Leser v. Wagner, 120 Md. 671, 87 Atl. 1040.

Injunctions against municipalities and officers, see 20 STANDARD PROC. 164, 778.

[a] Only the levy of the illegal portion of the proposed tax will be enjoined if it is separable from the remainder of the levy. Southern R. Co. v. Board of Comrs., 148 N. C. 220, 61 S. E. 690.

[b] An action to contest a tax levy by way of a removal of a cloud upon the title of property will not lie. Standrod v. Case, 24 Idaho 365, 133 Pac. 651.

Enjoining collection of tax because of irregularities in the levy, see infra, V, G.

[a] "Such review will be allowed only in exceptional cases in which the public interests may be jeopardized. Where the errors complained of are in the auditing of town or county charges, though adding somewhat to the burden of the relator, the court will not, in the exercise of its discretion, inconvenience the public by the holding up of an assessment roll for review under the writ." People ex rel. Toms v. Bd. of Suprs., 199 N. Y. 150, 92 N. E. 389.

[a] Rule Stated.—"It is the duty of the public authorities to use sound business judgment on the question of estimating the amount of taxes required each year. They should endeavor to have in the treasury at all times enough money to meet all claims upon it, but sound public policy condemns exactions from the people, as taxes or otherwise, in advance of any needs of the government. The courts, however, will only interfere with the decision of the public authorities on these questions to prevent a clear abuse by such officials of their discretionary powers." *People ex rel. to be levied. State v. Asotin County, 79 Wash. 634, 140 Pac. 914.

15. See infra, this note, and 20 STANDARD PROC. 112.

[a] A demand that the tax be levied should ordinarily be made (Grand v. People, 16 Colo. App. 215, 64 Pac. 675; Garden City First Nat. Bank v. Morton County, 7 Kan. App. 739, 52 Pac. 580. But see United States v. Saundacs, 124 Fed. 124, 59 C. C. A. 394), but is unnecessary (2) where it is clear that a demand if made would be useless. *Port Townsend v. First Nat. [d] As an Independent Proceeding. (1) "The writ of mandamus in the circuit courts is never an independent suit, as it is in many states and in England, but it is only a proceeding ancillary to the judgment which gives the jurisdiction, and when issued becomes a substitute for the ordinary process of execution." Fuller v. Aylesworth, 75 Fed. 694, 699, 21 C. C. A. 505. (2) But the judgment in the action in which the claim is established cannot order the levying of a tax to satisfy it, since such an action has none of the features of a mandamus proceeding. *Clarendon v. cient to induce the court to withhold the writ in the exercise of its judicial discretion,<sup>20</sup> mandamus will not issue. While the determination of the proper authorities of the amount for which a tax levy shall be made will not ordinarily be controlled,<sup>21</sup> if the amount of money required to meet a particular existing and valid obligation is fixed and definite a levy sufficient to meet the obligation will be enforced.<sup>22</sup> If however, the officers whose duty it is and who are ordered to make the levy, still refuse to perform their duty, the court is without authority to appoint a commissioner to perform their duty for them.<sup>23</sup>

And in the absence of some averment to this effect, we must assume that he simply erred in his judgment. But for such an error the only remedy is by application to the board of equalization." Ballerino v. Mason, 83 Cal. 447, 23 Pac. 530.

D. FAILURE OF OWNER TO RETURN PROPERTY FOR ASSESSMENT. — A property owner who fails to make a true and proper return of the property owned by him, as required by law, for purposes of assessment and taxation not only may have an arbitrary valuation placed upon the property by the assessor, or a penalty added to its estimated value,<sup>34</sup> but, under many statutes, he becomes liable for the imposition of a fine, in a court proceeding,<sup>35</sup> or subject to a criminal prosecution.<sup>36</sup> The indictment must be certain and specific in its allegations,<sup>37</sup> though pursuant to the general rule in such cases<sup>38</sup> it may charge the offense substantially in the terms of the statute.<sup>39</sup>

E. JUDICIAL REVIEW OF ASSESSMENTS. — 1. In General. — Acts of an assessor or board of equalization without or in excess of the jurisdiction conferred upon them by law, will be relieved against by the courts,<sup>40</sup> and fraudulent or capricious and arbitrary conduct upon their part will also be remedied.<sup>41</sup> Under some statutes, too, mistakes and irregularities can be corrected by the courts,<sup>42</sup> and an assessment made right to an appeal does not exist.<sup>49</sup> An appeal, when authorized by statute is usually regarded as being an exclusive remedy.<sup>50</sup> It must be perfected within the time limited by the particular statute under which it is taken,<sup>51</sup> and any condition precedent to the right to appeal, created by statute, must be complied with.<sup>52</sup> An appeal from the ion Water Co., 32 Colo. 382, 76 Pac. 1060; Milam v. Smith-Mauer Bros., 38 Okla. 328, 133 Pac. 33.

[b] Where an appeal is given to a property owner the value of whose property is "fixed by the board of equalization," the right of appeal exists when the board merely confirms the value placed upon the property by the assessor. Arizona Copper Co. v. State, 15 Ariz. 9, 137 Pac. 417.

[c] The grant of an appeal to the courts is not unconstitutional as conferring upon them legislative powers. Hopper v. Oklahoma County, 43 Okla. 288, 143 Pac. 4, L. R. A. 1915B, 875. Contra, Silven v. Board of Comrs., 76 Kan. 687, 92 Pac. 604, 13 L. R. A. (N. S.) 716, 14 Ann. Cas. 163.

[d] An appeal by one property owner from the amount of an assessment upon another property owner, is given by some statutes. Carr v. Louisiana Central Lumb. Co., 136 La. 1025, 68 So. 113.

[e] Limitations on the Right to Appeal.—An appeal can be maintained only upon such grounds and to review such matters as are specified in the statute. Colo.—Board of Comrs. v. Denver Union Water Co., 32 Colo. 382, 76 Pac. 1060. Okla.—Rogers v. Duncan, 57 Okla. 20, 156 Pac. 678. Pa.—H. C. Frick Coke Co. v. Mt. Pleasant, 35 Pa. Co. Ct. 138.

[f] Thus, (1) in some states an appeal lies only to review the question whether property is exempt from taxation (Sanitary District v. Board of Review, 258 Ill. 316, 101 N. E. 555; Keokuk & H. Bridge Co. v. People, 185 Ill. 276, 56 N. E. 1049), and (2) not to determine whether an assessment was so grossly excessive as to amount to fraud. Sanitary District v. Board of Review, 258 Ill. 316, 101 N. E. 555.

[g] The right to an appeal may be given by clear implication from the language of a statute which does not expressly confer it. Ex parte Howard-Harrison Iron Co., 119 Ala. 484, 24 So. 516, 72 Am. St. Rep. 928.

[a] A right to a hearing in a court is not necessary to the validity of an assessment. "The legislature has the power to designate the tribunal which shall make assessments upon property. It may confer this power upon a judicial or a non-judicial body, and the owner of property assessed cannot claim that he has been deprived of 'due process of law' because the legislature does not permit him to have a hearing in court." In re Mississippi River Power Co., 241 Fed. 194. [a] If an appeal from the assess-

tion for the writ must be made within the time limited by the statutes,<sup>89</sup> and even in the absence of any statutory limitation, relief will be denied, at least in a doubtful case, where the petitioner has been guilty of unwarranted delay in seeking the writ.<sup>90</sup> The taxes assessed need not be paid as a condition to the issuance of the writ,<sup>91</sup> unless this is expressly required by statute,<sup>92</sup> and the prior payment of the tax, under protest, will not be a bar to the proceedings.<sup>93</sup>

b. Grounds for Refusal of Writ.—The issuance of a writ of certiorari to review an assessment proceeding is a matter within the sound discretion of the court.<sup>94</sup> The writ will not issue to review on assessment where the petitioner has been guilty of misconduct upon his part,<sup>95</sup> where the right to the writ is not clearly established and its issuance would result in great public inconvenience and mischief,<sup>96</sup> where the writ if issued, would be futile,<sup>97</sup> or where it does not clearly appear that petitioner will not be prejudiced if the writ is refused.<sup>98</sup>

[a] Review of Action.—Administrative officers in passing upon a claim for exemption act judicially but their acts are not conclusive. They are officers clothed by statute with limited powers, and where the statute leaves to such officers the determination of questions of a jurisdictional character it is well settled that their decision does not prevent an aggrieved party from invoking a judicial remedy and when their authority depends upon the existence of some fact which they erroneously determine to exist, their subsequent acts are void. Elmhurst Fire Co. v. New York, 213 N. Y. 87, 106 N. E. 920.

V. COLLECTION OF TAXES.—A. IN GENERAL.—The power to levy and collect a tax carries with it implied power to adopt and employ the procedure necessary to make the collection,<sup>11</sup> and the form of the remedy to be adopted is a matter lying largely within the legislative discretion.<sup>12</sup> The tax collector is ordinarily confined to the statutory methods and cannot resort to an ordinary civil action unless the former prove unavailing or inadequate.<sup>13</sup> Statutes altering existing or creating new methods for the collection of taxes, are usually treated as remedial in character and as applying to taxes already levied.<sup>14</sup> Any existing remedy may be enforced by a tax collector although he has advanced the amount of the taxes in his settlement with the proper public officers.<sup>15</sup>

[a] If the state is made a party defendant to the action as claiming

An answer must clearly state the grounds upon which the invalidity of the tax proceedings is attacked and raise an issue thereon.<sup>57</sup> If defendant desires to have affirmative relief by having the lien set aside he must ask it by appropriate cross-complaint.<sup>58</sup>

5. Judgment.—Judgment may be rendered by default where no answer is filed.<sup>59</sup> Any statutory requirements must be substantially observed.<sup>60</sup> Thus statutory provisions as to the time at which,<sup>61</sup> or the manner in which,<sup>62</sup> the judgment shall be rendered and entered must be strictly followed. Where the proceeding is purely statutory the judgment should contain a recital of all jurisdictional facts.<sup>63</sup> It should correctly describe the property,<sup>64</sup> determine the amount of taxes and penalties due,<sup>65</sup> decree a foreclosure and direct the sale of an interest in the land, the particular nature of the interest claimed must be described, where a statute requires it in such suits against the state. Lippmann v. Meade, 154 App. Div. 464, 139 N. Y. Supp. 298.

[a] A Tax Is Not a Debt.—"The power to tax is wholly statutory. A tax roll is not a judgment roll, and a tax thereon does not partake of the nature of a judgment, except as to its validity and amount and the manner in which it can be proven. The authority for the tax and its binding effect upon the person taxed rests upon the authority given to the taxing officers by the legislature. When the taxing officers have jurisdiction their action cannot be attacked collaterally, and to that extent the tax is in the nature of a judgment. The tax, however, does not become a debt within the meaning of such word as commonly used. Taxes do not rest upon contract, express or implied. They are obligations imposed upon citizens to pay the expenses of government. They are forced contributions, and in no way dependent upon the will or contract, express or implied, of the persons taxed." Rochester v. Bloss, 185 N. Y. 42, 47, 77 N. E. 794. tained.<sup>79</sup> A special remedy provided by statute for enforcing the payment of a tax is in many states regarded as exclusive of an action to collect the tax,<sup>80</sup> unless such a remedy is clearly inadequate, or has been invoked without success.<sup>81</sup> But in some states, statutory remedies are not treated as exclusive of an action to recover the amount of a tax,<sup>82</sup> and in other states the right to maintain an action at law to recover all or particular classes of taxes is given by statute.<sup>83</sup>

[a] "A tax may or may not be a 'debt' under a particular statute, according to the sense in which the word is found to be used. But whether the government may recover a personal judgment for a tax depends upon the existence of the duty to pay, for the enforcement of which another remedy has not been made exclusive. Whether an action of debt is maintainable depends not upon the question who is the plaintiff or in what manner the obligation was incurred, but it lies whenever there is due a sum either certain or readily reduced to certainty." *United States v. is usually,<sup>89</sup> though not always,<sup>90</sup> required to be made.

3. Jurisdiction and Venue.—The statutes usually prescribe the courts in which actions for the recovery of taxes may be maintained.<sup>91</sup> Where a tax is not regarded as a debt,<sup>92</sup> an action to recover it cannot be maintained in a court having jurisdiction only of actions on contract express or implied.<sup>93</sup> An action to recover taxes is not ordinarily maintainable in the courts of a jurisdiction other than that in which the tax was levied,<sup>94</sup> nor does it generally involve any grounds for removal to the federal courts.<sup>95</sup>

Venue.—The action is subject to the general rules and principles governing venue.<sup>96</sup> The right to a change of venue depends upon the local statute.<sup>97</sup>

4. Joinder of Actions.—The right to recover taxes levied and assessed on the same property for different years constitutes different causes of action.<sup>98</sup> Such causes of action may be joined,<sup>99</sup> but must be separately stated.<sup>1</sup> Taxes due different governmental bodies under

[a] Reason for the Rule.—"The amount of the annual tax levy in villages and the various purposes for which taxes are imposed are fixed and defined in advance of the levy and the money raised must be expended for the purposes so defined. If the taxpayer can properly refuse to pay his tax when called upon by the collector because he has a claim for services against the village which is not included in the tax levy, it is plain that some legitimate and necessary village expenditure must be curtailed. If the taxpayer's claim is disputed the collection of the tax must await and abide the result of a lawsuit and meanwhile the financial affairs of the village will be thrown into great confusion.

Therefore, public policy requires that taxes be paid and that claims

d. Trial.—The general principles governing the practice in the trial of civil actions apply to actions for the collection of taxes.<sup>25</sup>

E. CRIMINAL LIABILITY.—Failure to pay some classes of taxes is occasionally made a crime subject to prosecution by indictment.<sup>26</sup>

F. REMEDIES FOR ILLEGAL COLLECTION.—Taxes illegally collected may, under certain circumstances, be recovered in an action for money had and received, from the governmental body receiving the tax,<sup>27</sup> or from the tax collector.<sup>28</sup> An action for damages may be maintained against the tax collector if he has acted illegally or negligently,<sup>29</sup> and if property has been illegally seized, an action of trover and conversion,<sup>30</sup> or trespass,<sup>31</sup> may be maintained. If the property has been sold to enforce payment, the owner may waive the tort and sue in assumpsit for the money received at the sale.<sup>32</sup> While an action of replevin may be maintained to recover possession of property seized as the property of the tax payer but not belonging to him,<sup>33</sup> such an action cannot be maintained, in many states, by a tax payer who is contesting the validity of the tax.<sup>34</sup>

2. Adequacy or Inadequacy of Legal Relief.—a. Generally. Except where the statute expressly authorizes an injunction against an illegal tax,<sup>40</sup> the mere illegality of the tax does not warrant injunctive relief without regard to the adequacy of legal relief or other substantive ground of equitable jurisdiction;<sup>41</sup> and if the taxpayer has an adequate remedy at law, injunction to restrain the collection of the tax will not issue.<sup>42</sup> There is, however, authority apparently to the

[a] "Where the bill seeks not only to restrain the collection of a void tax but also to enjoin other threatened levies, the expenditure of money already collected or the sale of bonds issued without authority of law, then equity will take jurisdiction to restrain such acts on the ground that the remedy at law is inadequate and to prevent a multiplicity of suits." [b] Where the tax if collected would be divided and paid to different public corporations, (1) against each of which a separate action would be required, an injunction may issue.

the mere possibility that numerous suits might result is not sufficient to confer equitable jurisdiction,<sup>57</sup> and the fact that successive appeals to superior administrative bodies may be necessary does not create a case of threatened multiplicity of suits.<sup>58</sup>

4. Cloud Upon Title.—When an illegality in a tax is not apparent upon the face of the proceedings, and a cloud upon the title to real property would result, the court may restrain the collection of the tax,<sup>59</sup> and the same rule is applicable when a tax deed is made prima facie or conclusive evidence of title.<sup>60</sup> If, however, an adequate remedy at law exists, relief in equity will be denied.<sup>61</sup> been recognized and declared by the courts,<sup>76</sup> will be enjoined. If the property against which the tax was levied<sup>77</sup> or assessed<sup>78</sup> was beyond the territorial limits in which the tax was authorized by law, or was under the law exempt from taxation,<sup>79</sup> or if the tax is sought to be enforced against one who was not the owner of the property assessed,<sup>80</sup> a court of equity will also afford relief.

7. Statutes Authorizing or Limiting Injunction.<sup>81</sup>—Statutes sometimes authorize injunction against illegal taxes, in which event the relief may be had regardless of other remedies and without other ground of equitable jurisdiction.<sup>82</sup> On the other hand, statutes frequently prohibit the issuance of an injunction against the collection of taxes,<sup>83</sup> or limit the grounds upon which an injunction may issue to those specifically enumerated in the statute.<sup>84</sup> The equity powers of the federal courts, however, are not limited by statutory restrictions on the equity jurisdiction of the state courts in this class of cases.<sup>85</sup>

8. Conditions Precedent.—Payment or tender of a void tax need not be made as a condition precedent to institution of the suit.<sup>86</sup> Where, however, the tax is merely excessive, or illegal in part only, payment or tender of the valid portion must be made,<sup>87</sup> except where it is impos-

Remedies Against Land Owner. — The tax purchaser cannot obtain reimbursement from the owner of the land for the amount paid by him at the tax sale,<sup>38</sup> except where such right is given him by statute.<sup>39</sup> But where the property owner brings his action in equity to quiet his title or cancel the tax deed as a cloud upon his title, he will be required to reimburse the purchaser at the tax sale for all his legitimate expenditures in connection with the property as a condition to obtaining equitable relief,<sup>40</sup> including the taxes assessed for sub-

[a] A demand for payment made as prescribed by statute, is usually a condition precedent to the maintenance of the action. Brown v. Ford, 112 Miss. 678, 73 So. 722; Gulf Export Co. v. State, 112 Miss. 452, 73 So. 281; Sherwood v. Barnes County, 22 N. D. 310, 134 N. W. 38.

[b] Judgment cannot be confessed in such an action. Brown v. Ford, 112 Miss. 678, 73 So. 722.

[c] The statute in force at the time of the tax sale determines (1) the right to reimbursement. State ex rel. Brodie v. Krahmer, 112 Minn. 372, 128 N. W. 288. (2) The statute is not retroactive. Norris v. Burt, 56 Neb. 295, 76 N. W. 551.

[d] A purchaser from the tax sale purchaser may obtain reimbursement. State ex rel. Babcock v. County of Chisago, 115 Minn. 6, 131 N. W. 792, Ann. Cas. 1912D, 669.

Mo.—Williams v. Sands, 251 Mo. 147, 158 S. W. 47.

[a] Where taxes were in fact paid by the land owner the purchaser at a tax sale subsequently held is not entitled to reimbursement. La Salle Varnish Co. v. Glos, 254 Ill. 326, 98 N. E. 538.

39. Ala.—See Street v. Doyle, 137 Ala. 332, 65 So. 775. Ind.—Stephenson v. Martin, 84 Ind. 160. Mo.—Bingham v. Birmingham, 103 Mo. 345, 15 S. W. 533.

[a] Unless a claim for relief is pleaded affirmatively the defendant is not entitled to recover an amount to reimburse him for necessary expenditures. Lippincott v. Taylor (Tex. Civ. App.), 135 S. W. 1070.

[b] Such Statutes Do Not Operate Retrospectively.—Wengler v. McComb (Mo.), 188 S. W. 76.

[c] Where the right of the tax purchaser to have his title quieted is barred by limitations he cannot recover the amount paid by him for his title. King v. Bolt, 151 Iowa 1, 130 N. W. 818.

[d] An equitable defense interposed in the action at law does not entitle the tax purchaser whose title is invalid to recover the purchase price. Williams v. Sands, 251 Mo. 147, 158 S. W. 47.

40. See supra, VIII, E, 4 and Morrison v. Semer, 164 Mich. 208, 129 N. W. 1; Williams v. Sands, 251 Mo. 147, 158 S. W. 47.

[a] The excess paid by the purchaser over the amount of the taxes, penalties and costs, is regarded as a voluntary payment and cannot be re-sequent years and paid by the purchaser,<sup>41</sup> and the cost of improvements made upon the property.<sup>42</sup>

2. Enforcement of Lien.—Where by statute a lien upon the premises is given to a purchaser at a tax sale which conveys no title, for reimbursement of the moneys expended by him,<sup>43</sup> the lien may be enforced by an action in a court having jurisdiction of such matters,<sup>44</sup> or in some states, may be declared and enforced in any action in which the validity of the tax title is attacked.<sup>45</sup>

IX. PENALTIES AND FORFEITURES.—A. PENALTIES.—A penalty created by statute for non-compliance with the provisions of a taxing statute may be recovered in a penal action,<sup>46</sup> or, in an action brought to recover the taxes assessed.<sup>47</sup>

B. FORFEITURES.—A forfeiture of property for failure to pay taxes assessed upon it can be enforced only in an action brought for that purpose,<sup>48</sup> though it has also been held that no judicial proceedings are required to consummate a forfeiture which becomes complete upon a failure of the owner to comply with the requirements of the statute.<sup>49</sup>

Collection of the tax is ordinarily made in the course of the probate proceedings in the settlement of the estates of decedents and prior to distribution of the estate and discharge of the executor or administrator;<sup>60</sup> if the tax is not paid, however, an action for its recovery may be maintained against the person from whom the tax is due.<sup>61</sup> A tax voluntarily paid cannot be recovered, although it may prove to have been illegal;<sup>62</sup> where, however, the tax was paid involuntarily and under protest, an action to recover it may be maintained,<sup>63</sup> and the statutes sometimes provide a method for obtaining repayment of an illegal tax.<sup>64</sup>

I. CONSTRUCTION OF LINES.—Under the laws now existing in most states and applicable to all classes of public service corporations, the determination of the necessity for and the mode and manner of construction of telephone and telegraph lines is left to the public service commissions of the various states.<sup>1</sup> A license to construct a telegraph or telephone along a public street does not justify an assault upon an abutting property owner who seeks to prevent the work.<sup>2</sup>

II. REMEDIES FOR UNAUTHORIZED USE OF PRIVATE PROPERTY.—The use of private property by a telegraph or telephone company, without the consent of the owner, may be enjoined,<sup>3</sup> and if a telegraph or telephone line is constructed over or across the property of a nonconsenting land owner ejectment may be maintained to secure its removal.<sup>4</sup>

III. ACTIONS FOR INJURIES BY ABUTTING PROPERTY OWNERS.—When the use by a telegraph or telephone company of a public street or highway constitutes an additional servitude upon the land of an abutting property owner, who owns the fee in the street, an action to recover the damages sustained may be maintained by him,<sup>5</sup> or he may abate the nuisance thereby created,<sup>6</sup> or he may dispossess the company by an action of ejectment,<sup>7</sup> or according to some authorities, obtain an injunction to prevent the use of the property until compensation is paid to him.<sup>8</sup> Such a company is also subject to an action for damages for trespass when it enters the premises of an abutting property owner and without his consent, cuts and mutilates shade trees, the branches of which overhang the street.<sup>9</sup> Whether a cause of action exists for an injury occasioned by the necessary trimming and cutting of trees, is not uniformly settled; under some authorities<sup>10</sup> the action telephone system is a crime at common law,<sup>40</sup> and under many statutes.<sup>41</sup>

VI. SERVICE, REGULATION AND CONTROL.—Telephone and telegraph companies, as public service corporations, are subject to regulation and control by the state and municipalities within which they do business.<sup>42</sup> The rendition of service by them, at reasonable rates and without discrimination, may be compelled by mandamus,<sup>43</sup> or by an application to the various public service commissions which now exist in most states.<sup>44</sup> A telegraph company is also liable for the damages occasioned by its improper refusal to receive and transmit a message,<sup>45</sup> and, in some states, is subject to a penalty imposed by statutes in such cases.<sup>46</sup>

VII. ACTIONS FOR DAMAGES ARISING OUT OF SERVICE.

A. IN GENERAL.—Similar rules govern the liability of both telephone and telegraph companies for negligent or improper performance of their public duties,<sup>47</sup> and so far as based upon negligence and the acts of servants, the general principles governing those subjects must be followed.<sup>48</sup>

B. WHO MAY SUE.—1. Generally.—In some states a husband can maintain an action to recover for mental anguish<sup>49</sup> suffered by his tained by him he may recover. When either the sender,<sup>95</sup> or the addressee,<sup>96</sup> is the agent of an undisclosed principal, he may maintain the action in his own name.

[a] Where a duplicate message was sent by the company without authority

C. WHO MAY BE SUED. — A telegraph company which accepts a message is liable for its incorrect transmission,<sup>97</sup> or delay in or failure to deliver the message,<sup>98</sup> although the act of negligence resulting in the injury, was the act of a connecting company.<sup>99</sup> The propriety of joining the agent or servant of the company follows the general rules elsewhere treated.<sup>1</sup>

D. NATURE OF THE ACTION. — 1. In General. — In accordance with the principles elsewhere treated,<sup>2</sup> and subject to the limitations hereinafter discussed, the action may be either in tort or contract,<sup>3</sup> depending upon whether the liability is regarded as contractual or tortious.<sup>4</sup> An action for damages for negligence in altering a message is not an action for an injury to personal property.<sup>5</sup>

2. By Sender. — The sender of a telegram whose message has been incorrectly transmitted or delayed in delivery, has a choice of remedies;<sup>6</sup> he may sue either for breach of the contract<sup>7</sup> under which the of the sender, the agent, addressee, could recover for the loss sustained. Pearlstone v. Western Union Tel. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 199 S. W. 860.

[a] "The action may be based upon a violation of the contractual duty which a telegraph company owes to the sender of the message, or it may be based upon the general legal duty that all companies of this kind owe to the public in its dealings with the public. The action may sound in contract, or it may sound in tort. The party may waive the breach of contract and sue for damages based upon the legal wrong—the tort involved in the act. Actionable negligence is always based on a violation of some duty, whether that duty arises from contractual relationships existing between the parties, or whether the duty is imposed upon the wrongdoer by the law itself." *Bernstein v. particular circumstances of the case make it such,<sup>16</sup> the action may be in contract. An action pursuant to statute authorizing the addressee to sue, is in effect one for negligence.<sup>17</sup>

4. Determination of the Character of the Action. — It is frequently a matter of considerable difficulty to determine whether a complaint is based on a breach of contract or on a tort,<sup>18</sup> or on a statute.<sup>19</sup> In accordance with the principles elsewhere discussed,<sup>20</sup> where negligence in misstating the language of the message,<sup>21</sup> or in failing to deliver a message or in not delivering it promptly,<sup>22</sup> is averred as the gravamen of the action, it will be held to be in tort. On the other hand, if from a consideration of all of the allegations of the complaint the basis of the cause of action appears to be the breach of a contract, the action will be held to be contractual in its nature.<sup>23</sup> Averments of negligence may be merely descriptive of the mode in which a contract was broken,<sup>24</sup> and on the other hand, averments as to the contract may be pleaded by way of inducement to the allegation of facts constituting the tort.<sup>25</sup> Averments of a contract, in a complaint setting out the facts, will not prevent the action from being one based upon a statute.<sup>26</sup>

[a] "There is a clear distinction between a notice of negligence and a claim for damages. It is no doubt often the case that notice is given to this company concerning the negligence of its employes in transmitting and delivering telegrams, and complaint made thereof without any thought of making a claim for damages. A mere notice to the company that its employes have been negligent, with the circumstances thereof, is a very different thing from a presentment of a claim for damages based on such negligence, and to hold that a stipulation which requires a presentment of the claim for damages in writing is satisfied by a notice of negligence on which the claim is based would do violence to the language used, and be in effect making a different contract between these parties." *Western Union Tel. [a] An allegation of a delivery to plaintiff of a forged message is sufficient, as negligence will be presumed. State Bank of Commerce v. Western Union Tel. Co., 19 N. M. 211, 142 Pac. 156, L. R. A. 1915A, 120.

76. See the title "Negligence."

[a] General Averment.—"The rule is that the duty to exercise care being shown, the failure to perform that duty, the negligence causing the injuries complained of may be well averred in the most general terms, little if at all short of the mere conclusions of the pleader; and this upon the entirely sufficient consideration, among others, that if the defendant has been guilty of negligence he knows as well as, or better, than the plaintiff can in what that negligence consisted." Postal Tel.-Cable Co. v. Jones, 133 Ala. 217, 225, 32 So. 500.

for the error or delay,<sup>80</sup> and that by no other means could the suffering have been averted.<sup>81</sup> That the mental anguish suffered was proximately caused by the error or delay should appear from the facts alleged.<sup>82</sup>

b. Allegations of Damage.—(I.) In General.<sup>83</sup>—The complaint must state facts from which it appears as a matter of law that damages have been sustained,<sup>84</sup> though it will be sufficient if only nominal damages appear to have been suffered.<sup>85</sup> General damages need not be alleged.<sup>86</sup> Special damages, however, must be expressly alleged,<sup>87</sup> and it must by doctor for loss of professional services. But see Harrison v. Western Union Tel. Co., 71 S. C. 386, 51 S. E. 119. Tex.—Southwestern Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Givens (Tex. Civ. App.), 139 S. W. 676; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Smith (Tex. Civ. App.), 133 S. W. 1062.

[b] A general averment (1) has been held insufficient. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Forest (Tex. Civ. App.), 157 S. W. 204. (2) It is not necessary to plead the evidence upon which plaintiff relies. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Rowe, 44 Tex. Civ. App. 84, 98 S. W. 228; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Martin (Tex. Civ. App.), 191 S. W. 192. Co. v. Mitchell*, 91 Tex. 454, 44 S. W. 274, 66 Am. St. Rep. 906, 40 L. R. A. 209. (4) When it is alleged that it would have been necessary for plaintiff to take a certain train, it must also be alleged that he would have taken that particular train. Southwestern Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Givens (Tex. Civ. App.), 139 S. W. 676.

[c] That a funeral would not have been postponed if plaintiff had replied to a delayed telegram, requesting a postponement, need not be alleged. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Cook, 45 Tex. Civ. App. 87, 99 S. W. 1131.

81. See infra, this note.

[a] When a telegram sending money to enable a person to make a journey was not delivered it should be alleged that the necessary money could not be obtained by the person from any other source. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Melvin, 175 Ky. 480, 194 S. W. 563.

[b] But where notice of a death and funeral was delayed in transmission, the plaintiff addressee need not allege that he replied or that if he had done so the funeral would not have been delayed, since this is matter for defensive pleading. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Cook, 45 Tex. Civ. App. 87, 99 S. W. 1131, funeral message.

appear, in actions ex contractu at least, either from the face of the message,<sup>88</sup> or from the other facts alleged,<sup>89</sup> that the damages claimed were within the reasonable contemplation of the defendant. If the pleading of special damages is insufficient, general damages may nevertheless be recovered,<sup>90</sup> unless the nature of the action is such that only special damages are recoverable.<sup>91</sup>

(II.) In Mental Anguish Cases. — Damages for mental anguish may in some states be recovered under a general averment of damage;<sup>92</sup> in other states they must be pleaded specially,<sup>93</sup> and in actions ex delicto other damage to the person, estate, or reputation must be alleged.<sup>94</sup> When the contents of the message are not such as to impart notice that mental suffering is likely to arise from the negligence of the company in delivering the message, the facts showing that the company had actual notice of the circumstances surrounding the parties and their relationship should be alleged,<sup>95</sup> except where otherwise provided by statute.<sup>96</sup>

[a] "The complaint is sufficient if it alleges knowledge of facts and circumstances from which a person of ordinary intelligence and prudence should have known that such damages would result from delay in delivering the message, for facts are well pleaded, which may, by reasonable intendment, be inferred from the facts and circumstances directly alleged. Therefore, in determining the sufficiency of the allegations of the complaint in which the telegram is set out in full, we may consider the information which the telegram itself afforded, when read in the light of the attendant circumstances known to defendant, and also alleged in the complaint." *Simkins v. [a] When the action is for failure to call the plaintiff to receive a telephone message, the fact that the company had notice of the nature of the message must be alleged. Southwestern Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Givens (Tex. Civ. App.), 139 S. W. 676.

(III.) Exemplary Damages.—The complaint need not contain a distinct and express claim for exemplary damages,<sup>97</sup> though the facts alleged must be such as to warrant their allowance.<sup>98</sup>

2. Plea or Answer.—The defendant's plea or answer should conform to the general rules elsewhere treated.<sup>99</sup> Affirmative defenses must be specially pleaded.<sup>1</sup> This is true of the defense that a claim for damages was not presented within the time limited by the terms of the contract under which the contract was accepted, where compliance with such a stipulation is not regarded as a condition precedent to the right to maintain the action which must be alleged in the complaint.<sup>2</sup>

I. TRIAL.—1. In General.—Proof of delay in the delivery of a message,<sup>3</sup> and proof of delivery of an erroneous or altered message establishes prima facie the negligence of the telegraph company,<sup>4</sup> and if accompanied by proof of damages sustained as a proximate result of the negligence,<sup>5</sup> justifies a recovery. Evidence of special damages will not be received unless the incurring of such damages is alleged in the complaint.<sup>6</sup> In actions to recover for mental anguish, there can be no recovery unless it is proved that action contemplated in the message,

[a] Ratification of Agent's Act. When gross negligence is the basis of the claim for exemplary damages, the complaint should allege that the act of the defendant's agent was either directed, ratified, or adopted by it. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Schoonmaker (Tex. Civ. App.), 181 S. W. 263, a verdict does not cure a defect in the pleading in this particular.

2. Questions of Law and Fact.<sup>11</sup>—When the evidence is conflicting or reasonable minds might properly draw different inferences from it, it becomes a question for the jury to determine whether a mistake was actually made in the message as transmitted,<sup>12</sup> whether the defendant used due diligence and was reasonably prompt in transmitting,<sup>13</sup> or delivering<sup>14</sup> a message, at what time the message was delivered,<sup>15</sup> whether the message was delivered by the sender to a person who was the agent of defendant,<sup>16</sup> whether the telegram was in part at least for the benefit of the addressee,<sup>17</sup> whether the injury suffered was caused by the negligent act of the company,<sup>18</sup> whether plaintiff exercised reasonable care to minimize his injury,<sup>19</sup> the amount of damages to which plaintiff is entitled,<sup>20</sup> whether punitive damages should be awarded,<sup>21</sup>

[a] Unexplained delay of seventeen hours in the delivery of a telegram is sufficient evidence to carry the question of defendant's willfulness to the

whether the plaintiff could and would have acted upon the request contained in the message,<sup>22</sup> whether the action contemplated by the message could have been taken in time to have been of benefit to the person interested,<sup>23</sup> and whether defendant's agent did not know that a message accepted by him could not be delivered promptly on arrival at its destination.<sup>24</sup> The reasonableness of a stipulation in the contract is ordinarily a question for the court to determine;<sup>25</sup> but it is a question for the jury whether a stipulation was agreed to or a regulation established,<sup>26</sup> whether a claim for damages was presented within the time limited by the contract,<sup>27</sup> or whether defendant had waived its rules as to office hours.<sup>28</sup>

3. Variance.—In accordance with the rules elsewhere treated,<sup>29</sup> a material variance between the allegations of the complaint and the proof, will prevent a recovery,<sup>30</sup> but an immaterial variance will be disregarded.<sup>31</sup>

some states.<sup>3</sup>

Accounting in Equity. — In a proper case, equity may compel an accounting between tenants in common.<sup>4</sup>

C. ASSUMPSIT. — Although at common law an action of assumpsit could not be brought by one tenant in common against his cotenant,<sup>5</sup> the general rule under the modern practice is otherwise.<sup>6</sup>

Action for Rent. — At common law an action for rent did not lie by one tenant in common against another except by appointment as bailiff to render an account.<sup>7</sup>

Baber v. Henderson, 156 Mo. 566, 570, 57 S. W. 719, 79 Am. St. Rep. 540.

[b] Rationale of Rule.—"A plaintiff in ejectment must recover on the strength of his own title, and his recovery must consequently be in accordance with his title. Tenants in common have several and distinct titles and estates, independent of each other, so as to render the freehold several also. They are separately seized and there is no privity of estate between them. . . . If tenants in common are separately seized, and there is no privity of estate between them, if they must sue separately or joint according to the circumstances of the case, the nature and the cause of action, or the character of the injury to be redressed, it follows as a necessary corollary that one tenant in common cannot maintain ejectment or sue and recover in any form of action for the interest and benefit of the others." Mobley v. Bruner, 59 Pa. 481, 484, 98 Am. Dec. 360. After quoting from this case, the court, in Williams v. Coal Creek Min. & Mfg. Co., 115 Tenn. 578, 583, 93 S. W. 572, 112 Am. St. Rep. 878, 6 L. R. A. (N. S.) 710, continues: "We think this a correct statement of the relations of tenants in common, and that the limitation upon the right of such a tenant, who sues alone for his interest, in property, is logically deduced from this relationship. We are satisfied that while the common law rule that tenants in common should not join in an action of ejectment has been modified in Tennessee, yet, from Barrow's Lessee v. Nave, 2 Yerg. [Tenn.] 227, it has been the established practice to confine the recovery of a tenant in common both in right and possession to his undivided interest in the property in controversy."

[a] The judgment should entitle "the plaintiff to be put in possession of the property, leaving him to share the possession with the defendant, as though he also were an owner of an

followed, however, is that one cotenant may sue alone and recover possession of the whole estate as against strangers.<sup>45</sup> Some statutes permit a joinder of tenants in common,<sup>46</sup> but they are permissive merely and do not require a joinder.<sup>47</sup>

In forcible entry and detainer suits, one tenant in common may sue a stranger without joining his cotenants,<sup>48</sup> and recover the possession of the whole premises.<sup>49</sup>

In Suits To Quiet Title. — One of several tenants in common may maintain a suit to remove a cloud on his title or quiet title,<sup>50</sup> or they may sue jointly to quiet title to the common property.<sup>51</sup>

3. In Actions To Recover Personalty or Its Value. — The rule at common law and apparently sanctioned by most authorities, is that in actions of replevin and detinue or their statutory equivalent, to recover the common personal property from third persons, all of the tenants in common must be joined,<sup>52</sup> unless the property is naturally severable and the share of one tenant in common only is unlawfully taken.<sup>53</sup> It would seem, however, particularly in those jurisdictions where an analogous rule is recognized in case of real property,<sup>54</sup> that as against third persons not claiming under or through other tenants in common, one cotenant ought to be entitled to the exclusive possession of the chattel and should therefore be entitled to sue alone to recover possession,<sup>55</sup> and it has been so held.<sup>56</sup> In most of the cases enunciating the contrary general rule the third party was in fact claiming through another of the cotenants.<sup>57</sup>

I. AS CONDITIONS PRECEDENT TO ACTIONS. — A. IN GENERAL. — A tender is sometimes necessary as a condition precedent to actions.<sup>1</sup>

B. ACTIONS OF TROVER AND REPLEVIN. — It is a condition precedent to an action of replevin for possession of goods in the possession of a person claiming a lien upon them,<sup>2</sup> or to an action of trover for their value,<sup>3</sup> that the amount of the lien be tendered to such party, unless for some reason a tender is excused or waived.<sup>4</sup> But a tender is not a prerequisite to an action for the loss of the goods.<sup>5</sup>

C. ACTIONS UPON CONTRACTS. — The necessity of a tender as a condition precedent to an action upon a contract depends upon the nature and purpose of the action and upon whether the action is at law or in equity, as well as upon the terms of the contract.<sup>6</sup> As a general rule when the covenants in the contract are mutual and dependent, it is a condition precedent to an action at law in affirmance of the contract, that the party suing put the other in default before he subjects him to the costs of litigation, by a performance, or by an offer or tender of performance,<sup>7</sup> except where such performance, offer or tender is excused for some reason.<sup>8</sup> In equity, however, since costs are in the discretion of the court, and since such relief can be granted to the plaintiff as he is entitled to upon such conditions as shall fully protect the defendant, some authorities hold that a tender is not a condition precedent to an action for specific performance of a contract,<sup>9</sup> and that a tender of a deed is not a condition precedent to an action by the vendor to enforce his lien.<sup>10</sup> The failure to make a tender under this rule only affects the question of costs,<sup>11</sup> but there is a line of cases holding that an actual tender is necessary even in such case.<sup>12</sup>

When the covenants are independent, a tender of performance is not a condition precedent to the action,<sup>13</sup> unless the performance of the covenant of the party suing is a condition precedent to the right to demand performance of the covenant of the adverse party.<sup>14</sup>

D. TO RESCISSION.—Tender of Thing Received Under Contract. — As a general rule, with certain specified exceptions,<sup>15</sup> it is a condition precedent to an action at law founded upon a rescission of a contract, that the plaintiff, whether he be the vendor or vendee, return or offer or tender to the other party what he has received upon the contract.<sup>16</sup> But the authorities are in conflict as to the necessity of a previous surrender of or offer to surrender possession as a condition precedent to a suit in equity for rescission, one line of authorities holding a previous surrender or offer is necessary,<sup>17</sup> the other holding to the contrary.<sup>18</sup>

Tender of Purchase Money. — When a conveyance is not to be made until payment of the consideration, a purchaser suing for a recovery of the purchase money paid must put the vendor in default by paying or tendering the balance of the purchase money, if the contract has not been rescinded by mutual consent, and if it does not provide for a return of the money under other circumstances.<sup>19</sup>

E. TENDER WAIVED OR EXCUSED. — A tender which would otherwise be necessary may be waived by the parties,<sup>20</sup> and it is excused where it would be wholly nugatory or a useless idle ceremony,<sup>21</sup> provided the party, whose duty it is to make a tender, is ready and able to do so.<sup>22</sup> Thus a tender is excused when the person to whom it is to be made, before the time fixed for performance, repudiates the contract,<sup>23</sup> denies its existence,<sup>24</sup> or denies liability thereunder,<sup>25</sup> or where he abandons the contract and refuses to perform it,<sup>26</sup> or notifies the party suing that he will not perform it,<sup>27</sup> or when he prevents the making of a tender,<sup>28</sup> or evades the party making it,<sup>29</sup> or where he fails to attend at the time and place appointed for the consummation of the contract.<sup>30</sup> So also a tender is excused when the party to whom a tender should be actions as well as to suits in equity,<sup>38</sup> although the circumstances under which a tender or offer is necessary may not always be the same in the two classes of cases.<sup>39</sup> So where a tender or offer of performance appears to be essential but is not alleged, plaintiff must allege facts showing an excuse for the failure to make the tender or offer,<sup>40</sup> and the ability to make it.<sup>41</sup> In equity it is generally regarded as necessary that the bill or complaint contain an offer or allegation of readiness and ability to pay or otherwise perform,<sup>42</sup> and where a previous tender or offer is not a condition precedent, this is all that is required to satisfy the maxim that he who seeks equity must do equity.<sup>43</sup>

2. By Defendant.—Where a previous tender has been made by the defendant, in order to avail himself of the benefit thereof he must plead it,<sup>45</sup> as where he seeks thereby to defeat or mitigate liability for costs,<sup>46</sup> and, except as otherwise provided by statute,<sup>47</sup> it is not available under the general issue.<sup>48</sup> It cannot be taken advantage of for the first time on appeal.<sup>49</sup>

denial.<sup>56</sup> But it is held there is no such inconsistency between a general denial and the tender of a smaller sum than plaintiff claims, as to prevent their being pleaded together,<sup>57</sup> and the same is true as to a denial of damages and a plea of tender of amends.<sup>58</sup> And a qualified general issue or denial of the claim may be pleaded with a tender of that portion of the claim excepted from the denial.<sup>59</sup>

D. HOW PLEADED.—1. Generally.—When it is necessary to plead a tender, whether as the foundation of a cause of action or as a defense, all the facts essential to show a valid and sufficient tender should be set forth with particularity.<sup>60</sup> This is the rule both at law,<sup>61</sup> and in equity,<sup>62</sup> though the same strictness is not always observed in equity when the only bearing tender may have is on the right to costs.<sup>63</sup> What facts must be pleaded as a tender depends somewhat upon what, under the common law or statute, amounts to such tender or excuse, a matter outside the scope of this work. As a general rule, there should be an allegation or showing of the actual production and offer of the thing tendered,<sup>64</sup> its acceptance or refusal,<sup>65</sup> and, in case of non-production, the averment of a valid excuse.<sup>66</sup> A lone plea of tender to part of a claim is bad.<sup>67</sup>

2. Time and Place.—The time<sup>68</sup> and place<sup>69</sup> of making the tender should be definitely stated, and as to the former the plea should show an offer at a proper time.<sup>70</sup>

3. Amount, etc.—The amount tendered must be averred,<sup>71</sup> and it should appear from the facts stated or by direct affirmation that such amount is the entire sum due.<sup>72</sup> Thus a plea of a tender made after commencement of the action should show that the amount tendered included costs, and separately state the principal amount and the amount representing costs.<sup>73</sup> Whether the offer is of legal tender or its equivalent should be stated with sufficient particularity to determine its nature.<sup>74</sup> Also when the thing tendered is a chattel it

4. Continued Readiness and Ability.<sup>77</sup> — In addition to alleging that he tendered the amount due, the pleader must aver, when it is necessary to keep the tender good, that he has at all times since the tender been ready, able, and willing to pay.<sup>78</sup> The same rule applies to suits in equity.<sup>79</sup> In cases involving the tender of a chattel the averment of continued readiness and ability is not generally necessary.<sup>80</sup> Nor is it necessary when the effect of a tender is to destroy a lien.<sup>81</sup> The averment of readiness to pay cannot, as a rule, be made in lieu of an actual tender,<sup>82</sup> except when it is shown that through the fault of the adverse party a tender before suit was not possible,<sup>83</sup> but in equity, when the right to relief is not based on a previous tender, as in a suit to quiet title,<sup>84</sup> such a plea has been held sufficient, as an offer to do equity, which is all that can be required.<sup>85</sup>

III. OBJECTIONS, DEMURRER, ANSWER AND REPLY.

The person to whom a tender is made must, at the time, specify any objection he may have to the tender, or be deemed to have waived it,<sup>86</sup> such, e. g., as that the amount tendered did not include interest,<sup>87</sup> or was not legal tender,<sup>88</sup> but such objection need not be made to a premature tender,<sup>89</sup> nor to a tender which cannot be made good.<sup>90</sup> Likewise, if no objection is made to the sufficiency of a plea of tender, any irregularity therein is waived.<sup>91</sup> An objection to the sufficiency

[a] A definite tender under an indefinite option is not binding for a failure to specify objections when the tender is made. Klein v. Markarian, 175 Cal. 37, 165 Pac. 3.

[b] "Due" Offer.—An offer of ten dollars is not a due offer of payment of a debt of nearly $20,000 within the meaning of the statute providing that an obligation for the payment of money is extinguished by a due offer of payment, etc. Colton v. Oakland Bank, 137 Cal. 376, 70 Pac. 225. See also Allen v. Chatfield, 172 Cal. 60, 156 Pac. 47.

[c] Waiver Goes Only to Sufficiency of Tender.—It is no doubt true that a failure to object to the amount of the tender is a waiver of the objection that it was less than the amount due, but in considering the sufficiency of the tender the court may consider that fact. The estoppel only goes to the question of the sufficiency of the tender, and does not affect the question of the amount actually due. Bradford v. Fidelity Sav. & Loan Society, 177 Cal. 247, 170 Pac. 404.

[d] Change of Objection.—Where a tender is made and refused, the grounds for refusal being specified, the objection raised cannot be changed and the tonderee at the trial permitted to advance other unspecified objections. Owens v. North State Life Ins. Co., 173 N. C. 373, 92 S. E. 168.

of a plea of tender may be taken, as a rule, at the trial of the case,<sup>92</sup> but not after judgment.<sup>93</sup> But when the objection is to the sufficiency of the tender for failure to make a deposit in court, it must as a general rule, be made not only in the lower court,<sup>94</sup> but before trial,<sup>95</sup> and, according to which party is in default, before answering,<sup>96</sup> or pleading over.<sup>97</sup>

IV. PAYMENT OR DEPOSIT IN COURT.<sup>5</sup> — A. IN GENERAL. It is a general rule that where a tender is made which, if accepted, is intended to operate as a discharge of an obligation, the tender, if rejected, must be kept good,<sup>6</sup> and, in the event of an action brought on the obligation, this is accomplished by bringing or depositing in court the thing tendered.<sup>7</sup> When the plaintiff's right to relief does

[a] Excusing Failure To Make Tender.—When tender is necessary as a condition precedent to maintaining the action, but has not been performed, and timely objection is made by the defendant, the plaintiff, in order to bring himself within an exception to the rule of tender, must affirmatively plead, in his reply, or replication, the facts which bring him within the exception, e. g., that it would have been useless, or some other fact showing an excuse for failure to make tender. *Wessel v. [a] "Payment into court is payment to the plaintiff." Ahrens v. Fenton, 138 Iowa 559, 115 N. W. 233.

[b] Rationale of Rule.—A tender is not effectual under the code unless the money is accepted or is paid into court. The payment into court is equivalent to an acceptance of the amount tendered and is deemed a payment to the plaintiff on account of the contract obligation or of a conceded liability for the injury. Taylor v. Brooklyn El. R. Co., 119 N. Y. 561, 23 N. E. 1106.

[c] Where There Are Several Counts.—"We, therefore, understand the rule to be, that where a party pays money into court, on a declaration which sets out a special contract, he thereby admits the contract as alleged, and a breach thereof with damages to the amount paid in. But where such payment is made in an action of indebitatus assumpsit, containing the money counts, the defendant thereby admits only some liability on some contract under the money counts, and if the plaintiff seeks to recover any further sum, he is bound to prove a contract or liability on the part of the defendant, as well as a larger sum due." *Hubbard v. [a] Rule Stated.—"Formerly, the defendant obtained a rule which permitted him to pay into court what he considered to be due, and whereby it was directed that unless the plaintiff accepted it, it should be struck out of the declaration and paid to the plaintiff or his attorney and that the plaintiff should not be permitted to give evidence of it. . . . The statutes of many of the states now authorize a deposit in court of the amount tendered, without obtaining a rule against the plaintiff. . . . The effect of the deposit under the statute is, practically, the same as under the rule." Sanders v. Mosbarger & Son, 159 Mo. App. 488, 493, 141 S. W. 720.

I WITHDRAWAL OF. — Since the money paid into court becomes the property of the tenderer,<sup>42</sup> he may withdraw it at any time,<sup>43</sup> upon order of court,<sup>44</sup> though it is the modern practice in equity to treat the money paid in as security for the final decree.<sup>45</sup> The power of the debtor or tenderer over the money ceases and he cannot withdraw it, as a rule,<sup>46</sup> unless for some reason the clerk does not receive the money in his official capacity.<sup>47</sup> Not only does the tenderer lose all right to the money paid in, but a court of law itself has no power to make an order in the same action which in effect retransfers the title.<sup>48</sup> The rule may be otherwise, however, in equity under special circum-

(3) But when a plaintiff, in an action to compel a redemption from a foreclosure sale, makes a tender, but fails to keep it good between the time thereof and the time of payment into court, and consequently loses the benefit thereof, and fails in the action, he may withdraw the tender, though sufficient to cover the defendant's costs may be impounded. *Dunn v. J. PLEA OF DEPOSIT IN COURT.—It is a general rule that in all cases where a tender must be kept good by a payment into court, such payment must be pleaded.<sup>50</sup> The averment is to the effect that the money has been deposited in court, or is now brought into court, to be paid to the adverse party.<sup>51</sup> The amount alleged must equal the amount of the tender, but need not be averred to be the identical money used in making the tender.<sup>52</sup>

[a] Rule Stated.—After reviewing the equity practice with respect to tenders, the court in Caesar v. Capell, 83 Fed. 403, 434 says: "It is another result of these cases, and their authorities to which they lead, that, where money has been paid into court upon an admission that that amount is due, the defendant will not be allowed to retake it, scarcely under any circumstances, though it might be that under some peculiar conditions it could be repaid to him. It would not do to say that the court has not the power to refund it to the party who paid it in, even upon such an admission, if it should turn out that the voluntary payment had been made under some misapprehension that would excuse its force and effect as being a voluntary appropriation of an amount that was due; but, except under special and irregular emergencies, it would not be repaid."

[a] Plea of Tender as Sole Defense. A plea of tender as a sole defense is irregular unless it alleges a payment of the amount into court, with notice to the plaintiff. Wilson v. Wilson, 131 N. Y. Supp. 81.

[b] On Appeal from Justice's Court. In a justice's court, where the pleading is informal, and payment into court by deposit of the amount with the constable is pleaded orally, on appeal to a superior court, where an answer is filed, such answer is defective unless it contains a plea of payment to the lower court. Brickett v. Wallace, 98 Mass. 528.

[c] Readiness To Pay in Lieu of Tender.—Where the defendant was unable to make a proper tender before the commencement of the action through the fault of the plaintiff, he is not excused thereby from making and pleading a payment into court, and it is not sufficient to plead a readiness to pay. *Greeley v. profert of a deed may be required,<sup>53</sup> it is not ordinarily necessary to aver the bringing into court of specific articles.<sup>54</sup>

V. PROVINCE OF JUDGE AND JURY.—Where payment into court is pleaded, the court must determine the truth of the averment by a proper investigation; it is not a matter for the jury.<sup>55</sup> Under conflicting evidence, waiver of objections to a tender is a question of fact for the jury,<sup>56</sup> likewise whether a tender was made<sup>57</sup> to the proper person,<sup>58</sup> or waived,<sup>59</sup> and whether the amount, if accepted, was tendered in full settlement of the demand,<sup>60</sup> are ordinarily matters for the jury.

VI. JUDGMENT.—A. IN GENERAL.—A lone plea of tender, unaccompanied by payment into court, when such payment is necessary, authorizes a judgment in plaintiff's favor for the amount of the tender.<sup>61</sup>

B. WHEN DEPOSIT IS MADE.—When a tender, accompanied by a deposit in court, is accepted, a judgment of dismissal may be entered.<sup>62</sup> When the tender is refused and proves to be less than the recovery, in some jurisdictions the judgment should be entered for the full amount found to be due and the deposit credited thereon;<sup>63</sup> in other jurisdictions the judgment is entered for the amount found to be due in excess of the tender.<sup>64</sup> But if the sum brought into court equals the amount recovered, the judgment should be for the defendant, the fendant,<sup>74</sup> when a sufficient tender is made by the latter before the commencement of the action and kept good by a deposit in court.

2. After Suit Brought.—After the commencement of the action, if the defendant makes a sufficient tender of an amount equal to the sum due and accrued costs, that is, an amount sufficient to satisfy the judgment, he should be held exempt from costs accruing subsequent to the tender.<sup>75</sup> A tender, made and pleaded for the first time after suit has been brought, does not entitle the defendant to costs already accrued.<sup>76</sup>

C. IN CASES OF INSUFFICIENT TENDER.—An insufficient tender cannot be relied upon to throw the burden of costs upon the adverse party.<sup>77</sup> Thus a tender coupled with an unwarranted condition is ineffective.<sup>78</sup> The plaintiff is entitled to costs when the defendant's ten-as a general rule the complainant is not entitled to costs in the absence of a tender which is a condition precedent to equitable relief,<sup>88</sup> as in a suit for specific performance,<sup>89</sup> or to redeem from a tax sale,<sup>90</sup> unless such tender is waived by the defendant.<sup>91</sup> However, where he makes such tender, its refusal may cast the liability for costs upon the defendant,<sup>92</sup> providing it is sufficient,<sup>93</sup> and, when necessary, kept good by a deposit in court.<sup>94</sup> On the other hand, the complainant may properly be taxed with costs where the defendant makes a sufficient tender before the commencement of the suit,<sup>95</sup> or thereafter, providing it includes accrued costs.<sup>96</sup>

I. LICENSES AND CENSORSHIP. — The granting of licenses to theaters being discretionary, mandamus will not lie to compel the granting of a license, unless arbitrarily refused,<sup>1</sup> but the writ may issue to compel the consideration of an application therefor.<sup>2</sup> Similarly an interference with a production without a license will not be enjoined where the discretion in denying a license was not arbitrarily exercised.<sup>3</sup> The courts can review<sup>4</sup> the action of a board of censors only when the board acts fraudulently, arbitrarily or in excess of its authority.

By statute and charter, licenses to conduct concert rooms and theaters may be revoked upon petition to the courts.<sup>5</sup>

II. PROSECUTION OF UNLAWFUL EXHIBITIONS.—An indictment for unlawfully exhibiting theatrical performances or for exhibiting without a license must charge the offense in accordance with the general rules elsewhere treated.<sup>6</sup>

III. REMEDIES WHERE ACTOR'S CONTRACT IS BROKEN. While equity will not grant specific performance of a contract of an actor or performer,<sup>7</sup> it will restrain a breach by enjoining him from acting elsewhere, if his services are individual and peculiar because of their special merit or unique character,<sup>8</sup> unless the damages for a breach are liquidated in the contract.<sup>9</sup> Some courts limit their relief to cases where the contract contains a negative clause not to perform elsewhere,<sup>10</sup> but this limitation is not observed by others.<sup>11</sup>

An action will lie against a theater manager for maliciously procuring an actor to breach his contract with the plaintiff.<sup>12</sup> And in the case of a motion picture actor of unique and exceptional skill,

I. SCOPE OF ARTICLE. — The following article is designed principally to cover the procedural aspect of computing time. A general statement of controlling principles of law is all that is intended in view of the particular applications of those principles in various articles throughout this work. Matters concerning time to plead are elsewhere discussed,<sup>1</sup> as are also those bearing on the pleading of time in civil<sup>2</sup> and criminal<sup>3</sup> proceedings and on variance and failure of proof as to time.<sup>4</sup>

[a] "A day is not capable of subdivision into hours, minutes, or seconds, but is to be taken as a whole. In such computations, the hours are not counted to ascertain whether a period of twenty-four hours, or a given number of such periods, have elapsed between the act to be done and the day from which the time is to begin running. The fractions of the days are no more taken into consideration than are the fractions of the seconds. The consequence is that every day, and every part of that day, is, by this rule, one day before every part of the succeeding day. The last moment of any day is, in contemplation of law in such cases, one day before the first moment of the next day, although the elapsed time is infinitesimal." *Cosgriff v. [b] Upon this subject, an English court uses the following language: "Our law rejects fractions of a day more generally than the civil law does. . . . The effect is to render the day a sort of indivisible point; so that any act, done in the compass of it, is no more referable to any one, than to any other portion of it; but the act and the day are co-extensive; and therefore the act cannot properly be said to be passed until the day is passed." *Lester v. 3. Month.—The early common-law rule adopted in England, and in some early decisions in the United States, was that in the absence of anything indicating a different intention, a month in law meant a lunar month or twenty-eight days.<sup>12</sup> At the present time, however, either because of statute or by force of judicial decision, a month in law means a calendar month,<sup>13</sup> or that period of time elapsing between a given date and the corresponding date of the next succeeding or preceding month by name.<sup>14</sup>

It provides that when legal notices are required to be published "any number of weeks, or for any number of weeks the term 'week' shall be construed to mean either a period of time known as a calendar week beginning on Sunday and ending with Saturday, or any period of seven consecutive days beginning with the date of the first publication of notice." In re Johnson's Estate, 99 Neb. 275, 155 N. [b] "But we take the law to be well settled, however, in matters of practice, where any particular number of days not expressed to be clear days is prescribed, the rule in regard to the computation of time, is, not to exclude both the day on which the notice is served, and the day on which the act is to be performed but to exclude the one and include the other. . . . The spirit if not the letter of our statute, sustains this computation. [b] "The general current of the modern authorities on the interpretation of contracts, and also of statutes, where time is to be computed from a particular day of a particular event, as when an act is to be performed within a specified period from or after a day named, is to exclude the day thus designated, and to include the last day of the specified period." Sheets v. Selden, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 177, 190, 17 L. ed. 822, 826.

[c] "The reason for the rule that, in the computation of time the first day will be excluded, is that the law takes no notice of fractions of a day, except in certain cases, where the hour itself becomes material; and time is not, therefore, computed from the hour of the day on which the event happens to the corresponding hour of the day of performance, but the computation is from the day when the act was done. Such day is regarded as a point of time, and the computation begins from the expiration of such day, as, if counted, it would fail to give the party affected the whole of that day, but would give only a fractional part of it." Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. v. Home Life & Acc. Co., 119 Ark. 102, 178 S. W. 314, 317.

uniform,<sup>34</sup> and it is impracticable, perhaps, to lay down in advance a rule applicable to every case that might arise.<sup>35</sup> Much depends upon the facts of the particular case and the circumstances in which it arises<sup>36</sup> for courts will always adopt that construction which will uphold and enforce, rather than destroy, bona fide transactions and titles and whenever it is necessary to prevent a forfeiture or to effectuate the clear intention of the parties the dies a quo will be included.<sup>37</sup>

[a] "It would be tedious and unprofitable to attempt a review of the very numerous modern decisions, or to lay down any rules applicable to all cases. Every case must depend on its own circumstances. Where the construction of the language of a statute is doubtful, courts will always prefer that which will confirm rather than destroy any bona fide transaction or title. The intention and policy of the enactment should be sought for and carried out. Courts should never indulge in nice grammatical criticism of prepositions or conjunctions in order to destroy rights honestly acquired." Griffith v. Bogert, 18 How. (U. S.) 158, 15 L. ed. 307.

for doing an act falls on Sunday, or a non-judicial holiday,<sup>98</sup> that day is excluded and the act may be lawfully done on the following day and if that day is also a non-judicial day then on the next business day thereafter.<sup>99</sup> In some jurisdictions, the rule is not applicable to the computation of time fixed by statute unless the statute itself so provides.<sup>1</sup> Sunday is thus excluded only where it is the last day of a prescribed period and not where it is one of the intermediate days,<sup>2</sup> unless the time limited is less than a week.<sup>3</sup> It has been held, moreover, that the rule of exclusion does not apply where the last day is expressed,<sup>4</sup> or where the period designated is more than seven days,<sup>5</sup>

I. GENERALLY.—The time in which to plead is generally governed by statute,<sup>1</sup> or rule of court.<sup>2</sup> Where the statute is silent, the matter rests in the court's discretion.<sup>3</sup> On failure to plead in time, the plaintiff may be nonprossed, or nonsuited,<sup>4</sup> and a default judgment may be rendered against the defendant,<sup>5</sup> provided, in some jurisdictions, that he has not actually pleaded before the default proceedings.<sup>6</sup> Where an action is begun by process the plaintiff has a limited time thereafter in which to file his pleading.<sup>7</sup> But where suit is commenced by filing of a complaint, it must be filed before process can issue.<sup>8</sup> An answer before the filing of a complaint is irregular.<sup>9</sup> Upon the opening of a default the court should fix a reasonable time to plead.<sup>10</sup>

II. PLEADING OUT OF TIME AND WAIVER.—A failure to plead within the time prescribed, is not an absolute forfeiture of the right to plead further, as the pleading may still be filed by leave of court.<sup>11</sup> Some courts hold that a party has no right to plead after expiration of the time therefor, without leave, and that a pleading so filed is a nullity and may be disregarded.<sup>12</sup> In a number of jurisdictions, however, the defendant has a right to plead at any time before tered, unless the court, for good cause shown, shall enlarge the rule.<sup>21</sup> But this practice does not obtain in many states.<sup>22</sup> In some states, actions may be commenced by filing a declaration to which is attached or on which is endorsed a rule to plead within a limited time.<sup>23</sup>

Unless otherwise provided by statute or rule of court,<sup>24</sup> orders or rules to plead are procured upon the motion of the party desiring pleadings from the adverse party,<sup>25</sup> and are sometimes required to be served on the adverse party or his attorney.<sup>26</sup> If not served before the ensuing term, they must be renewed from term to term until served.<sup>27</sup>

The plaintiff is not allowed any longer time to declare, without leave, than the time allowed by the defendant's rule. And if he do not declare before the rule is out, the defendant may, at any time before the essoinday of the next term, sign a nonpros, but not afterwards. The demand of declaration must be in writing. 1 Tidd. Pr. 458.

C. BY WHOM GRANTED. — Any judge of the court in which the action is pending may extend the time to plead.<sup>46</sup> Under some statutes, ex parte applications for extensions of time may be granted by other judges than that before whom the action is pending.<sup>47</sup>

D. WHEN APPLICATION MADE. — The time for making an application for leave to file a pleading out of time is sometimes limited by rule of court.<sup>48</sup> If the time to plead has not expired it may be extended, and if it has expired, leave to file the pleading out of time may be granted.<sup>49</sup>

E. PROCEEDINGS TO OBTAIN. — 1. Generally. — A compliance with any reasonable rule of court regulating the granting of extensions of time to plead is required.<sup>50</sup> If a default has been taken, it must be first set aside.<sup>51</sup> Statutes sometimes require the consent of the adverse party to an extension of time to plead beyond a certain time.<sup>52</sup>

2. Motion and Affidavit. — An extension of time to plead may be obtained by motion therefor,<sup>53</sup> supported by affidavit showing good cause,<sup>54</sup> and sometimes by an affidavit of merits.<sup>55</sup> When leave to file a certain pleading is asked, the pleading should accompany the notice of motion.<sup>56</sup> But when the parties are in court on the hearing of a motion for default, leave to answer may be given without a filing of a

80. After overruling demurrer, time to plead runs from service of notice is complete.<sup>81</sup> When service is deemed complete,<sup>82</sup> and the time to plead, therefore, begins to run,<sup>83</sup> depends somewhat upon the manner in which service is made.

In computing the time the rule is either to exclude the first and include the last day, or vice versa,<sup>84</sup> generally, the day of service or notice being excluded, and the last day included.<sup>85</sup> If the last day for pleading falls on a non-judicial day the time is extended to the next judicial day.<sup>86</sup> However, according to most authorities, non-judicial of the decision. See 6 STANDARD PROC. 1005.

West Side Brotherly Love C. & B. Soc.*, 51 Misc. 82, 99 N. Y. Supp. 206. See also Elliot v. Kennedy, 26 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 422; Van Horne v. Montgomery, 5 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 238.

[b] When a defendant served by publication appears and demands a copy of the complaint before the completion of service, his time to answer runs from the time of the service of the complaint in compliance with such demand. Kinley v. American Hdw. Co., 49 Misc. 334, 99 N. Y. Supp. 199, 18 N. Y. Ann. Cas. 142; Sanders v. People's Co-op. Ice. Co., 44 Misc. 171, 89 N. Y. Supp. 785.

[c] When personal service outside the state is made, (1) the time commences to run from the day of such service. Dykers, Alstyn & Co. v. Woodward, 7 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 313. (2) But where seizure of the res, either actual or constructive is essential to jurisdiction, the time to plead does not begin to run until such seizure has been made though process has been previously personally served on the non-resident defendant. Haase v. Michigan Steel Boat Co., 148 App. Div. 298, 132 N. Y. Supp. 1046 (levy of attachment). days intervening between the first and the last day, are counted.<sup>87</sup> Fractions of days are not regarded,<sup>88</sup> and the party has the whole of the last day in which to plead.<sup>89</sup>

Where a party is allowed "till," or "until" or "to" a specified day to plead, he may plead at any time during that day,<sup>90</sup> although some courts hold otherwise.<sup>91</sup>

Under a rule to plead instanter or forthwith, the party has twenty-four hours within which to plead, according to some courts,<sup>92</sup> but according to others, has only until the closing of the court on that day.<sup>93</sup>

While an irregular default stands, it has been held that the time to plead does not run.<sup>94</sup>

I. PLEADING TITLE OR OTHER INTEREST. — A. NECESSITY OF PLEADING. — 1. In General. — It is a rule of the common law,<sup>1</sup> of equity,<sup>2</sup> and under the code practice,<sup>3</sup> that title, or other interest, in real or personal property must be pleaded where relied upon as a ground for relief.<sup>4</sup>

2. Character of Title or Interest Relied Upon. — a. In General. (I.) Title or Ownership. — The estate alleged must be sufficient to support the claim for relief based upon it.<sup>5</sup> If the right to be enforced depends upon ownership in fee, such ownership must be alleged;<sup>6</sup> and similarly, it is necessary to plead any estate less than the fee upon which the party relies,<sup>7</sup> such as a joint tenancy,<sup>8</sup> an interest in remainder or reversion,<sup>9</sup> or a mere possessory interest.<sup>10</sup>

(II.) Possession.—When possession either actual or constructive is essential, it must be alleged,<sup>11</sup> and such an allegation may be sufficient where a present or possessory interest is involved.<sup>12</sup>

b. Title in Adverse Party.—When it is necessary to allege title, ownership or possession in the adverse party, no greater title need be averred than is sufficient to sustain the liability alleged, usually possession; how possession was acquired, as well as other particular statements of fact showing the source of the adverse party's title, being immaterial.<sup>13</sup>

B. MANNER OF PLEADING.—1. Generally.—Like other material facts, title or possession must be pleaded directly, or shown by necessary inference from the facts set forth.<sup>14</sup> It is not sufficient to plead

[a] No custom, on the part of the defendant himself, or other abstractors, can be relied upon to relieve him from the obligations imposed upon him by the statute. Crook v. Chilvers, 99 Neb. 684, 157 N. W. 617, Ann. Cas. 1918E, 90.

abstract is for the information and use of a certain person, he may maintain the action.<sup>70</sup> But ordinarily, being an action ex contractu, it may be brought only by the party with whom the agreement is made, that is, the one for whom the abstract is furnished.<sup>71</sup> However, when an abstract is reaffirmed and recertified for another party, such person, being injured by any defect therein, may maintain an action against the abstractor.<sup>72</sup>

C. PLEADING. — In action against an abstractor or certifier of title, plaintiff must set forth the facts constituting the cause of action<sup>73</sup> in accordance with the general principles elsewhere treated.<sup>74</sup> The agreement should be stated,<sup>75</sup> as well as the incompleteness or imperfection of the abstract or certificate,<sup>76</sup> and the fact that plaintiff placed reli-to date by extension, and (1) former certificates are made a part of the last certificate by reference and adoption, for an injury resulting from a defect in one of such prior certificates the party who orders the last certificate is the proper party to maintain the action and not the one for whom such prior certificate was made. Bremerton Dev. Co. v. Title Trust Co., 67 Wash. 268, 121 Pac. 69. III. PROTECTION OF PROPERTY PENDING TITLE IN CONTROVERSY.—A. IN GENERAL.—It is well settled that, without indicating a desire to favor either party, an injunction will be granted to preserve or protect the status of property,<sup>79</sup> the title of which is in [a] What is a defective abstract depends upon the circumstances of each case. So where an abstract is ordered to cover a certain period it is not incomplete because it fails to note something without the period. Douglas v. Title Trust Co., 80 Wash. 71, 141 Pac. 177.

B. PENDING AN APPEAL.—Pending an appeal from a decision determining the rights of the parties to the title of the property in controversy, on a showing that the injury would be irreparable or of a substantial nature,<sup>90</sup> want of an adequate remedy at law,<sup>91</sup> and a prima facie right,<sup>92</sup> an injunction, as a general rule, will issue to preserve the status of the property until the case is finally disposed of by the appellate court;<sup>93</sup> but it is held in some jurisdictions that when the original action is at law such injunction will not be granted.<sup>94</sup>

C. CONSIDERATIONS GOVERNING RELIEF.—In an application for an injunction to preserve the status of property the general rules relating to injunctions are applicable.<sup>95</sup> Thus there must be a real or sub-

C. PARTIES.—The statute itself usually provides who may maintain the action.<sup>7</sup> Ordinarily it may be brought by any person who claims the inheritance,<sup>8</sup> or a life estate,<sup>9</sup> and who himself or through some one holding under him, is in actual and peaceable possession,<sup>10</sup> though in some jurisdictions possession is not required.<sup>11</sup> All known claimants must be made parties.<sup>12</sup>

D. PLEADING.—The establishment of title in a burnt record proceeding may be by petition or cross-petition.<sup>13</sup> In some jurisdictions the petition must be accompanied by an affidavit.<sup>14</sup> The showing required is that specified by the statutes,<sup>15</sup> which may differ somewhat in their provisions, but usually include the loss or destruction of the record,<sup>16</sup> the nature of the claimant's estate,<sup>17</sup> from whom obtained.<sup>18</sup>

how long it has existed,<sup>19</sup> and actual, peaceable possession of the property,<sup>20</sup> though in some jurisdictions it is unnecessary either to allege possession<sup>21</sup> or to negative possession in others.<sup>22</sup> When an adverse claimant under a tax sale is made a party it is not necessary to deny the validity of his title,<sup>23</sup> since the burden is on him to establish his title.<sup>24</sup>

The defendant's pleas are sometimes specified by the statute, as that he may, if he answers, admit, confess and avoid, or traverse all material allegations of the petition.<sup>25</sup> If he claims title,<sup>26</sup> or merely a pecuniary interest,<sup>27</sup> his claim should be set out in full.

Award of Title. — The court may determine adverse claims,<sup>32</sup> and declare in whom the title is vested,<sup>33</sup> or make any order or decree necessary to render its decision effective.<sup>34</sup>

Pecuniary Award. — Where a tax sale purchase price and taxes are claimed<sup>35</sup> and proved,<sup>36</sup> a decree establishing the title in the plaintiff should also decree such remuneration to the adverse claimant.<sup>37</sup>

[a] Void Tax Certificates.—A defendant cannot recover reimbursement

Conclusiveness of Decree.—The decree, as in other cases to which the general rule of conclusiveness is applicable, is conclusive against all parties to the proceeding and their privies,<sup>38</sup> but persons interested in the property, not parties to the proceeding, providing they act within the period fixed by statute,<sup>39</sup> are not bound by the decree.<sup>40</sup>

V. PROCEDURE FOR REGISTRATION OF LAND TITLES UNDER TORRENS OR SIMILAR ACTS.—A. As against any one party or set of parties, it may be practically the same; but it needs no argument to show that a title could never, in ejectment, be settled as against the whole world, as can be done upon an application to register. And, conversely, relief may be had in ejectment which cannot be had in the registration proceeding, viz., possession of the premises." Peters v. Duluth, 119 Minn. 96, 137 N. W. 390, 41 L. R. A. (N. C. PARTIES. — As a general rule, especially in the United States, the statutes provide that a proceeding to register title to land may be brought by the owner or owners of the fee.<sup>66</sup> All persons having an interest in, or lien on, the land, or whose interests may be affected by the judgment or decree, should be made parties.<sup>67</sup> So any one residing on the property is a necessary party,<sup>68</sup> and in some jurisdictions the state is required to be made a party.<sup>69</sup> Any one claiming an interest, whether named in the petition or published notice of the pro-

[b] An interest in the proceeds of a sale of land sought to be registered for the purpose of selling is not an interest in the title as would make it necessary to join the owner thereof. Brummel v. Glos, 275 Ill. 28, 113 N. E. 996.

[c] Interest acquired pendente lite authorizes (1) a person to answer and assert his rights. Brown v. Hagadorn, 119 Minn. 491, 138 N. W. 941. (2) But on receiving notice he must not delay, the statute requiring an answer "at once," and six months is sufficient delay to bar him from asserting such interest. Brown v. Hagadorn, 119 Minn. 491, 138 N. W. 941.

[a] State must have an interest (1) in or lien upon the land, otherwise it is not a proper party. State ex rel Coburn v. Ries, 123 Minn. 397, 143 N. W. 981. (2) But this is not true in all jurisdictions, in some states the right of the state to be made a party

ceeding or not, may answer.<sup>70</sup> Adjoining owners, while under some statutes entitled to notice of the proceeding, are not entitled as such to intervene or be made parties defendant.<sup>71</sup>

D. JOINDER OF CAUSES.—Two or more separate pieces of land in the same county belonging to the applicant may be joined in a single application when contiguous,<sup>72</sup> or when the chain of title is substantially the same,<sup>73</sup> but ordinarily several owners of separate lots or parcels of land cannot unite in one proceeding to have their titles registered.<sup>74</sup>

E. PLEADING.—1. Application, Petition or Complaint.—A proceeding to register title is commenced by the filing of a verified application,<sup>75</sup> petition,<sup>76</sup> or complaint,<sup>77</sup> the form and contents of which are prescribed by statute.<sup>78</sup> But irrespective of the statute, the application generally, as in other cases, must contain a plain and concise statement of the cause of action,<sup>79</sup> setting forth the essential facts which entitle the applicant to a judgment or decree of registration<sup>80</sup> and a demand for judgment.<sup>81</sup> Thus the application, always having being based on the general public interest. Barkenthien v. People, 212 N. Y. 36, 105 N. E. 808. See also Meighan v. Rohe, 166 App. Div. 175, 151 N. Y. Supp. 785, affirmed, 216 N. Y. 677, 110 N. E. 165.

applicant does not rely upon adverse possession to establish his title,<sup>97</sup> which should show on its face that it is an original or a certified copy made in the ordinary course of business of a make of abstracts.<sup>98</sup>

2. Answer.—A defendant may resist an application for registration of title by relying solely upon the applicant's insufficiency of proof of title;<sup>99</sup> he is not limited to such questions as affect his individual interest;<sup>1</sup> but an answer must go to the material allegations of the application,<sup>2</sup> state particularly the defendant's interest in the land,<sup>3</sup> and the facts supporting his claim.<sup>4</sup>

Affirmative Relief.—In jurisdictions where a defendant may be granted affirmative relief,<sup>5</sup> if he desires to have the title to any part of the land in question registered in himself he must ask for it in a cross-demand,<sup>6</sup> and when he does so he must set up the precise interest he claims.<sup>7</sup>

F. EXAMINER.—The petition or application is generally referred to an examiner to take proofs and report his findings and conclusions to the court.<sup>8</sup> He is required to investigate fully all matters pertaining to the title,<sup>9</sup> and at a stated time for a hearing, which should not

The examiner's report should be a statement of facts, and conclusions based thereon,<sup>13</sup> and conclusions not supported by facts are valueless.<sup>14</sup> Thus it should specify, for the court's satisfaction, the steps taken by him to establish all material facts,<sup>15</sup> but, unless requested, the evidence is not properly a part of his report, the substance thereof being sufficient.<sup>16</sup> Application for an order to attach the evidence to the report should be made to the court.<sup>17</sup>

H. DEMURRER, OBJECTIONS AND AMENDMENTS.— In some jurisdictions a demurrer to an application to register title is not permitted,<sup>26</sup> in others it is used as in other actions and governed by the same general rules.<sup>27</sup>

I. HEARING. — So far as the title registration statute relates to the hearing and determination of a cause it is permissive and not mandatory.<sup>37</sup> A jury trial is not contemplated as a matter of right,<sup>38</sup> but under some constitutions cannot be denied.<sup>39</sup> The applicant is the moving party and entitled, irrespective of the form of the pleadings or of the shifting of the burden of proof, to the right to open and close.<sup>40</sup> The court is not bound by the examiner's report,<sup>41</sup> and should not rely upon the conclusions of the examiner without scrutinizing the facts upon which they are based.<sup>42</sup> but may hear the cause on the report alone, or may require additional evidence, the hearing in every case being finally before the court.<sup>43</sup> But the applicant must be required to establish his title,<sup>44</sup> to the satisfaction of the court,<sup>45</sup> and the court should hear and determine all controversies concerning such title.<sup>46</sup> Under a statute not permitting affirmative relief to the defendant, the court should dismiss the proceeding if for any reason the title is not a proper one for registration.<sup>47</sup> The applicant may voluntarily, without prejudice and on terms, withdraw at any time before final decree,<sup>48</sup> or the application may be dismissed as to a part of the land in quesbe made a party by amending the application. Schiessle v. Glos, 271 Ill. 374, 111 N. E. 127.

[a] It is the intent of the act to provide for the registration of only such titles as are found to be in the applicant, with such liens or outstanding interests as he is willing to admit; and if there be a hostile or conflicting interest the title is not to be cer-

tion,<sup>49</sup> but not where the title to such part is found to be in a defendant who may be entitled to a decree of registration.<sup>50</sup>

Findings of fact and conclusions of law, when issue is joined, as in ordinary actions, should be made by the court,<sup>51</sup> and the facts found must support its conclusions.<sup>52</sup>

J. JUDGMENT OR DECREE.—The general rules relating to judgments and decrees, where applicable, should be observed in all things pertaining to a decree of registration,<sup>53</sup> but its form and contents are generally prescribed by statute,<sup>54</sup> requiring a description of the land,<sup>55</sup> and the owners estate therein,<sup>56</sup> together with all particular estates and encumbrances to which the land or the owner's estate is subject.<sup>57</sup> As a general rule the decree must be for the registration of a fee simple estate,<sup>58</sup> in all or a part of the land,<sup>59</sup> in favor of either plaintiff or defendant,<sup>60</sup> but under some statutes affirmative relief may be granted only to the plaintiff.<sup>61</sup> The court is not restricted to determining the title of the respective parties, but may quiet title or remove a cloud thereon,<sup>62</sup> although it has no jurisdiction to determine the validity of tified forthwith, although the applicant may proceed at his peril, and upon the hearing show that the adverse interest is not in fact real; or he may take his discharge and clear his title in an independent action. Krutz v. Dodge, 66 Wash. 178, 119 Pac. 188, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 869.

Pecuniary Award to Defendant.—When a defendant is found to be entitled to remuneration in satisfaction of a pecuniary interest, a decree in favor of the applicant should protect the defendant's rights,<sup>65</sup> e. g., by making the registration of title conditional upon payment of the amount due the defendant,<sup>66</sup> or by declaring such amount a lien upon the land.<sup>67</sup> Under a decree awarding the defendant remuneration it is improper to order registration of the title forthwith.<sup>68</sup>

Conclusiveness.—A decree of registration of title to land in a proceeding wherein the court has jurisdiction of the subject-matter binds the land and is conclusive as against the world.<sup>69</sup>

Recording Notice of Appeal.—When an appeal is taken from a decree of registration, under some statutes, a notation of the pendency of such appeal should be ordered by the court to be made upon the record in the office of the registrar.<sup>76</sup>

L. COSTS.—The taxing of costs is discretionary with the court.<sup>77</sup> As a general rule they are assessed against the applicant,<sup>78</sup> but when the circumstances of a case make it inequitable and unjust to require the applicant to pay, either all or merely certain items of costs, they should be charged against the defendant.<sup>79</sup>

[e] Technical objections not based on any meritorious claim will not justify a reversal. McCrillis v. Glos, 276 Ill. 617, 115 N. E. 224.

[f] Parties.—One who is not a party may appeal from a decree of registration upon filing an affidavit showing that he is aggrieved thereby and that he had no notice of the proceedings. In re Waban Rose Conservatories, 218 Mass. 533, 106 N. E. 137.

[g] Invited Errors.—A party who invokes the provisions of the registration law, cannot be heard to say that it is not constitutional. Lewis v. Chamberlain, 69 Ore. 476, 139 Pac. 571.

[h] Decisions Applicable.—(1) An order permitting the filing of an answer to a petition for registration of title after the time limit is a matter of discretion and not appealable because it is not a final decision. Empire Mfg. Co. v. Spruill, 169 N. C. 618, 86 S. E. 522. (2) An appeal will not lie from an order denying a motion to dismiss the application. Peters v. Duluth, 119 Minn. 96, 137 N. W. 390, 41 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1044. (3) An appeal will not lie from a denial of a party's application for a jury trial. Peters v. Duluth, 119 Minn. 96, 137 N. W. 390, 41 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1044.

I. JUDICIAL REVIEW AND CONTROL OF TOWN PROCEEDINGS AND DECISIONS. — A. GENERALLY. — Where a town transcends or unlawfully exercises its powers, its acts are subject to judicial review in appropriate proceedings.<sup>1</sup> But when acting within the scope of their jurisdiction, decisions of town boards are not subject to collateral attack.<sup>2</sup>

B. APPEAL. — There is no appeal to the courts from town proceedings and decisions except as authorized by statute.<sup>3</sup> In some jurisdictions an appeal to the courts is permitted in favor of any interested party from orders or decisions of the body creating a town or towns,<sup>4</sup> or from an auditor's settlement of an officer's account, by the officer, the town, or a taxpayer on the town's behalf;<sup>5</sup> but an appeal cannot be used as a means for compelling an auditor to act,<sup>6</sup> nor for collecting an ordinary claim against a town.<sup>7</sup>

C. CERTIORARI. — Subject to the limitations and in accordance with the rules and principles elsewhere treated,<sup>8</sup> where there is no other method provided,<sup>9</sup> certiorari will issue to review town proceedings and official decisions,<sup>10</sup> such as the making of an illegal ordinance,<sup>11</sup> or proceedings of a board of auditors.<sup>12</sup>

[b] Appeal must be taken within thirty days (1) from filing report by auditors with the clerk of the court of quarter sessions. In re Eshelman's Account, 25 Pa. Dist. 820. (2) An appeal taken before the report is filed is premature and will be set aside. Columbus Tp. Auditors, 23 Pa. Dist. 357.

[c] The appellant must show that he is one of the parties authorized by statute to make the appeal, and what particular audit is appealed from. Hanover Tp. School Dist. v. Hughes, 17 Pa. Dist. 781.

[d] Judgment of the court of common pleas is final and no further appeal to the appellate court can be had. Lower Merion v. Cline, 211 Pa. 559, 61 Atl. 77.

[e] The time for taking appeal cannot be extended by the court and if not filed within the required time the decision of the auditors is final and conclusive. Chanceford v. Craley, 11 Pa. Dist. 724.

[a] The denial of an unliquidated claim may be reviewed by certiorari, although the board has adjourned.

D. MANDAMUS to town officers is governed by the general rules elsewhere discussed,<sup>13</sup> and in accordance therewith the writ will lie to compel auditors to settle an officer's account,<sup>14</sup> or to adjust a claim,<sup>15</sup> and in some cases to compel the payment of adjusted and liquidated claims,<sup>16</sup> but ordinarily not to review a decision of auditors allowing or denying a claim.<sup>17</sup>

E. IN EQUITY.—Subject to the limitations and in accordance with the general rules elsewhere treated<sup>18</sup> a bill in equity will lie by a taxpayer<sup>19</sup> to annul an order of the board of trustees,<sup>20</sup> to set aside a void contract,<sup>21</sup> or to restrain any illegal official act,<sup>22</sup> such as to enjoin the enforcement of a void ordinance,<sup>23</sup> the collection of a void tax,<sup>24</sup> or bond,<sup>25</sup> the making<sup>26</sup> or performance<sup>27</sup> of illegal contracts by town

The town itself is the proper defendant in actions to enforce its liability on claims in general,<sup>56</sup> and to recover damages resulting from the acts of officers committed within the scope of their authority,<sup>57</sup> although in tort actions generally the town and officer may be joined.<sup>58</sup> Statutes sometimes provide for action against the town treasurer, as such, to enforce claims against the town.<sup>59</sup> The town may sue one of its officers for money unlawfully expended by him, without joining other officers who participated in the unlawful act.<sup>60</sup> The proper parties to mandamus and injunction proceedings are elsewhere treated.<sup>61</sup>

D. PLEADING.—The pleadings in actions by or against towns or their officers, follow the general rules elsewhere treated.<sup>62</sup> The declaration or petition must state the necessary substantive facts,<sup>63</sup> whether the plaintiff seeks to settle a boundary dispute,<sup>64</sup> or to recover damages for negligence,<sup>65</sup> or to recover from a defaulting officer,<sup>66</sup> or his

F. JUDGMENT.—1. In General.—Judgments and decrees in actions of a town or its officers must conform to the rules elsewhere treated.<sup>82</sup>

2. Enforcement and Satisfaction.<sup>83</sup>—In a few states a judgment against a town may be enforced by execution,<sup>84</sup> though as a general rule it cannot be so enforced,<sup>85</sup> but should be audited as town charge and paid accordingly,<sup>86</sup> or, if not paid, mandamus should be resorted to.<sup>87</sup>

A town board, as a general rule, may order a judgment in favor of the town satisfied only on receipt of its amount in money or its equivalent.<sup>88</sup>

Where an execution issues it may be levied upon the property of the inhabitants of the town,<sup>89</sup> or of the town itself, if not exempt or used

Scope Note.— This article includes procedure in actions relating to unfair competition as well as in those concerning trade-marks, trade names and labels.

I. CIVIL REMEDIES.— A. EXISTENCE AND NATURE OF.— Trade-marks and trade names are property and courts of law and equity will protect their owner.<sup>1</sup> And the owner of a business, although without a lawful trade-mark, is entitled to protection against what is known as “unfair competition,” which consists in passing off or attempting to pass off upon the public, the goods or business of one man as the goods or business of another.<sup>2</sup> These rights are in general derived from and dependent upon the common law or state statutes, rather than upon federal law, since the congress has no general constitutional power to legislate upon them.<sup>3</sup> However, as an incident to its power to regulate

[a] Definition of, and Property Right in Trade-Mark.—“Any name, symbol, letter, figure or device adopted by the persons manufacturing or selling goods, and used and put upon such goods to distinguish them from those manufactured or sold by others, and employed so often and for such a length of time, as to raise the presumption that the public would know that it was used to indicate ownership of the goods in the person manufacturing or selling them, constitutes his trade mark. His right to the trade mark accrues to him from its adoption and use for the purpose of designating the particular goods he manufactures or sells, and although it has no value except when so employed, and indeed has no separate abstract existence, but is appurtenant to the goods designated, yet the trade mark is property, and the owner's right of property in it is as complete as that which he possesses in the goods to which he attaches it, and the law protects him in the enjoyment of the one as fully as of the other. In order that the claimant of the trade mark may primarily acquire the right of property in it, it must have been originally adopted and used by him—that is, the assumed name or designation must not be one that was then in actual use by others, (Upton's Trade Marks, 46)—and such adoption and use confer upon him the right of property in the trade mark. . . . The right of property does not in any manner depend for its inceptive existence or support upon statutory law, though its enjoyment may be better secured and guarded, and infringements upon the rights of the proprietor may be more effectually prevented or redressed by the aid of the statute than at common law. . . . The right is not limited in its enjoyment by territorial bounds, but subject only to such statutory regulations as may be properly made concerning the use and enjoyment of other property, or the evidences of title to the same; the proprietor may assert and maintain his property right wherever the common law affords remedies for wrongs.” Derringer v. Plate, 29 Cal. 292, 87 Am. Dec. 170.

foreign and interstate commerce, the congress has authority to regulate trade-marks and tradenames used in such commerce,<sup>4</sup> and it has exercised this power.<sup>5</sup> And in the exercise of their jurisdiction upon other grounds, federal courts are frequently called upon to apply the common law or state statutes.<sup>6</sup>

Statutes have been enacted in numerous states providing for the registration of trade-marks and labels and giving remedies at law and in equity to the owner of such property,<sup>7</sup> however these remedies existed at common law and may be availed of by one who has not registered his trade-mark pursuant to statute.<sup>8</sup>

B. JURISDICTION.—1. United States Courts.—The jurisdiction of the United States courts over trade-marks and trade names depends upon the general principles and rules elsewhere treated.<sup>9</sup> They have jurisdiction where the trade-mark has been registered under federal statutes, irrespective of the citizenship of the parties,<sup>10</sup> and without regard to the amount in controversy,<sup>11</sup> provided such registered trade-mark is placed on goods intended to be used in the commerce specified in the trade-mark statute.<sup>12</sup> But federal courts have no jurisdiction of suits for infringement of an unregistered trade-mark,<sup>13</sup> or of suits for unfair competition,<sup>14</sup> unless some other grounds of jurisdiction

mark, an action in the nature of deceit is proper.<sup>22</sup> An action on the case has been held proper where one has used the trade-mark of another,<sup>23</sup> and the federal statute provides for such an action for the damages caused by falsely or fraudulently procuring the registration or entry of a trade-mark.<sup>24</sup>

2. Pleading and Proof.—The declaration or complaint should allege facts showing plaintiff's right and the violation thereof by defendant.<sup>25</sup> In so far as these matters are also involved in equity suits, they will be found more fully discussed elsewhere in this article.<sup>26</sup> Plaintiff need not anticipate purely defensive matter.<sup>27</sup>

Questions of Law and Fact.<sup>28</sup>—In accordance with the general principles elsewhere treated,<sup>29</sup> what constitutes a trade-mark is a question of law for the court,<sup>30</sup> while whether in a particular case a trade-mark has been acquired,<sup>31</sup> and whether there has in fact been an infringement of it,<sup>32</sup> or unfair competition,<sup>33</sup> are ordinarily questions for the jury. So whether the plaintiff's label has become such a badge of origin and ownership as to be the subject of protection against a colorable imitation,<sup>34</sup> whether the falling off of plaintiff's trade was due to defendant's use of the trade-mark,<sup>35</sup> the fraudulent intent of defendant,<sup>36</sup> or whether there is a variance between the trade-mark declared on and that proved,<sup>37</sup> are for the jury to determine.

D. SUITS IN EQUITY. — 1. In General. — In equity, protection for trade-marks, trade names, and against unfair competition, may be had by means of injunction,<sup>38</sup> and an accounting of profits.<sup>39</sup>

2. Parties. — a. Plaintiff. (I.) Generally. — The suit should be brought by the owner of the trade-mark or trade name,<sup>40</sup> and one who has acquired the right to a trade-mark or trade name may resort to equity for its protection, though he is not the original designer or owner,<sup>41</sup> but one who has no more right to the trade-mark than the

[a] Theory on which court of equity acts is that a resemblance in, or an imitation of the names, signs, or marks, under which another conducts a business, is a deception practiced upon the public and an injury to the proprietor, in the loss of custom, and patronage; to redress which an action at law for damages is not a sufficient remedy. This is the principle one may extract from the very often cited opinions of Lord Eldon, in Hogg v. Kirby, 8 Ves. Jr. 215, 32 Eng. Reprint 336, of Lord Langdale, in Knott v. Morgan, 2 Keen 213, 48 Eng. and where damages and profits are sought such an allegation may be essential.<sup>70</sup>

(III.) Joinder of Causes. — Causes of action for infringement of a trade-mark and for unfair competition arising out of the same acts of the defendant may be joined.<sup>71</sup> A bill seeking to restrain a publication because its title violates a trade-mark and its contents violate copyrights owned by plaintiff is not multifarious.<sup>72</sup> Asking for an accounting as to profits and for damages is not a misjoinder.<sup>73</sup>

b. Demurrer or Motion To Dismiss — If the bill as a whole states facts entitling complainant to some relief a general demurrer will be overruled.<sup>74</sup> An objection that the trade-marks are invalid because consisting of geographical names will not be considered on demurrer in a suit for infringement of a trade-mark and unfair competition.<sup>75</sup> Where the exhibits attached to the bill or complaint shows there is no infringement a demurrer will be sustained.<sup>76</sup>

c. Answer. — The answer should be responsive to the bill,<sup>77</sup> and be under oath.<sup>78</sup> An answer denying intentional use to imitate and to deceive the public or defraud the complainant is a sufficient answer to a claim for damages.<sup>79</sup> The defendant will be allowed to plead by

d. Counterclaim or Cross-Bill.—The defendant may by cross-bill seek affirmative relief, regarding the trade-mark or trade name, against the plaintiff.<sup>81</sup> In an action under the code to restrain the use of a trade-mark or name the defendant may by counterclaim set up that he is the owner of such trade-mark or name and ask an injunction and damages against the plaintiff.<sup>82</sup> However, the defendant in a suit for infringement of a patent cannot seek affirmative relief for alleged unfair competition.<sup>83</sup>

4. Bill of Particulars.—The general rules as to bills of particulars apply to suits of this nature.<sup>84</sup> The complainant in a suit for unfair competition need not supply the names of persons to whom it alleged sales were made by the defendant.<sup>85</sup> The plaintiff in a bill to enjoin the imitation of his labels and trade-mark cannot be compelled to disclose the ingredients of his goods, because the defendant sets up in his answer that they are injurious.<sup>86</sup>

business will be required to account.<sup>39</sup> While generally the accounting will be had before a master,<sup>40</sup> it may be taken before the court.<sup>41</sup> Under the guise of requiring an account, a party will not be required to disclose his dealings with others so as to injure him in business competition.<sup>42</sup>

8. Res Adjudicata.—Where the issues raised in a subsequent suit are different from those disposed of in a former suit a plea of res adjudicata will be overruled.<sup>43</sup> An injunction may be obtained against the officers of a corporation individually though in a previous suit the corporation, its officers, agents or servants have been enjoined,<sup>44</sup> and a decree enjoining the selling agent of the defendant does not estop plaintiff from proceeding against the defendant in a subsequent suit for an injunction and an accounting.<sup>45</sup> An interlocutory decree between the same parties is not conclusive in a subsequent suit.<sup>46</sup>

[a] A county court of limited jurisdiction cannot transfer a cause to a district court if no statutory provision exists for making such transfer. Dyett v. Harney, 53 Colo. 381, 127 Pac. 226.

[b] An appeal to the wrong appellate court, in the absence of a statute permitting a transfer, should be dismissed. Feingold v. Lefkowitz (Tex. Civ. App.), 140 S. W. 106.

2. Holmes v. Straus, 283 Ill. 621, 119 N. E. 708.

[a] When the amount involved determines the class in which a case belongs, and no provision is made for transfer from one class to another in lated by statute<sup>3</sup> or rule of court,<sup>4</sup> and must be exercised in accordance with such statutes or rules.<sup>5</sup> Some statutes authorizing transfer are permissive,<sup>6</sup> others mandatory.<sup>7</sup>

II. PROCEEDINGS TRANSFERABLE.—Both civil<sup>8</sup> and criminal<sup>9</sup> proceedings are embraced within the acts empowering courts to transfer causes. The language used is generally broad enough to include any proceedings which could come before the court,<sup>10</sup> as will be seen from particular applications set out in the notes.<sup>11</sup>

the Chicago municipal court, a case must be commenced in the proper class and in the event of a mistake it cannot be transferred. Holmes v. Straus, 283 Ill. 621, 119 N. E. 708.

3. See the statutes.

4. See the court rules particularly those of the appellate courts.

[a] The power to make rules of procedure not inconsistent with any statute or law is generally given to, or is inherent in, the supreme appellate court, and includes rules relating to transfer of causes on appeal. See Cal. Supreme Court Rules xxxi-xxxiii, and In re Davidson, 167 Cal. 727, 141 Pac. 216.

[b] Rule and Statute Must Be Consistent.—The power to transfer a case cannot be originated by a rule of court, under a general provision permitting rules of procedure, when such rule is inconsistent with others expressly provided by the statute. Holmes v. Straus, 283 Ill. 621, 119 N. E. 708.

[a] Case Must Be Within Statute. Under a statute which provides for a transfer from an appellate to the supreme court of cases improperly in such appellate court from a lower court on appeal or writ of error, an habeas corpus proceeding originally begun in the appellate court cannot be transferred to the supreme court; and where a constitutional question is involved, which the appellate cannot determine, its only course is to quash the writ. Ex parte Webers, 200 Mo. App. 368, 206 S. W. 244. See also 275 Mo. 677, 205 S. W. 620.

[a] Docket Transfer.—A motion to transfer a cause from law to equity is addressed to the discretion of the court. See Gwinn v. Hobbs (Ind. App.), 118 N. E. 155; Toothaker v. Pennell, 106 Me. 188, 76 Atl. 488.

[b] Discretion as to court to which a transfer may be made, when a choice exists, generally rests with the court making the transfer. State ex rel. Wagener v. Cook (Mo. App.), 185 S. W. 758.

7. Spengler v. Davy, 15 Gratt. (56 Va.) 381. See Jelenko & Bro. v. Coleman, 22 W. Va. 221.

[a] Waiver Under Mandatory Act. While a statute may be mandatory, if the right is not asserted at the proper time, and the court has jurisdiction, the status of the cause may justify the court in using its discretion and refusing a transfer. Jelenko & Bro. v. Coleman, 22 W. Va. 221. As to waiver generally, see infra, III, E; IV, F.

III. CIVIL CAUSES. — A. COURTS TO AND FROM WHICH A CAUSE MAY BE TRANSFERRED. — 1. From One Federal Court to Another. The federal statutes provide for the transfer of civil causes under certain designated circumstances. Thus a case, whether at law or in equity, may, upon agreement of the parties or their attorneys, be ordered transferred from one district to another,<sup>12</sup> and cases arising in a newly created district or division, or in a county or territory which has been transferred from one district or division to another, may be ordered transferred from the district or division where they are pending to the one in which they arose.<sup>13</sup> Under certain circumstances, bankruptcy proceedings may be ordered transferred for the convenience of the parties in interest.<sup>14</sup>

[a] “Any civil cause, at law or in equity, may, on written stipulation of the parties or of their attorneys of record signed and filed with the papers in the case, in vacation or in term, and on the written order of the judge signed and filed in the case in vacation or on the order of the court duly entered of record in term, be transferred to the court of any other division of the same district, without regard to the residence of the defendants, for trial.” Fed. Jud. Code §58; 36 U. S. St. at L. 1103; U. S. Comp. St., 1916, §1040.

[b] For provisions applicable to particular states, see Fed. Jud. Code §§70

[a] The statute provides in effect that upon the creation of a new district or division, or upon the transfer of any county or territory from one district or division to another, civil actions pending at the time of the creation of any such district or division, or the transfer of any such county or territory, and arising within the district or division so created, or the county or territory so transferred, may be transferred for trial to the district or division so created, or to the district to which the county or territory is so transferred. [a] The provision of the statute is: In the event petitions are filed against the same person, or against different members of a partnership, in different courts of bankruptcy each of which has jurisdiction, the cases shall be transferred, by order of the courts relinquishing jurisdiction, to and be consolidated by one of such courts which can proceed with the same for the greatest convenience of parties in interest. Fed. Bankruptcy Act §32; 30 U. S. St. at L. 554; U. S. Comp. St., 1916, §9616.

From Territorial to District Courts.—Upon admittance of a new state into the union and the establishment of a federal district court therein, the records of the proceedings pending in the highest territorial court at the time of the admission are transferred to the district court of the state,<sup>15</sup> as well as all other cases pending in the trial courts of the territory in which writs of error or appeals could have been taken to the federal supreme court or circuit court of appeals.<sup>16</sup>

2. From One State Court to Another.—a. Between Appellate Courts.—(I.) Between Intermediate Appellate Court and Supreme Courts. Provision is frequently made in constitution and statutes for the transfer of causes from intermediate appellate to supreme courts and vice

[c] Parties in interest include all persons whose pecuniary interests may be directly affected by the bankruptcy proceedings. In re United Button Co., 137 Fed. 668.

[d] Priority of jurisdiction, when controlling the transfer, is determined by the date of filing the petitions, not by the date of an adjudication. In re Tybo Min. & R. Co., 132 Fed. 697; In re Elmira Steel Co., 109 Fed. 456.

[e] A transfer is not warranted by (1) the single fact that a part or all of the bankrupt's property is in the other district (In re Tybo Min. & R. Co., 132 Fed. 978), nor (2) when it is doubtful whether the greater convenience of the parties would be served. In re Sears, 112 Fed. 58.

[f] Proximity of the bankrupt's place of business and of a majority of his creditors, while persuasive, is not conclusive as to which court should assume final jurisdiction. In re United Button Co., 137 Fed. 668.

[g] Voluntary and Involuntary Petitioners.—The right to have the proceedings transferred exists when some of the petitioners are voluntary and others involuntary, as well as when all are involuntary. In re Waxelbaum, 98 Fed. 589.

(II.) Between Intermediate Appellate Courts. — Unless expressly authorized to do so one appellate court cannot transfer a cause pending before it to another appellate court.<sup>23</sup> The supreme court of the state is sometimes given power to equalize the dockets of courts of civil appeals by ordering the transfer of cases from those courts of civil appeals having a greater amount of business upon their dockets to courts of civil appeals having a less amount.<sup>24</sup>

b. In Trial Courts. — (I.) From One Department to Another. — Where a particular trial court is divided into two or more departments, the statutes or rules of practice usually make provision for the transfer of causes from one of such departments to another.<sup>25</sup> Transfer of causes from equity to law and from law to equity, is treated in a subsequent section.<sup>26</sup>

(II.) From One Place of Holding Court to Another — Where the statute authorizes sessions of the court to be held at different places within the county, it may also provide for the transfer of causes from one place of holding court to another.<sup>27</sup>

(III.) From One Court to Another. Transfers of causes from one trial court to another are of frequent occurrence and are effected in the manner and under the circumstances designated in the statutes. The facts and conditions may, in the particular jurisdiction, justify a transfer from one municipal court to another,<sup>28</sup> from a superior to a city either transfer the cause or dismiss the appeal. Landry v. Gonzales, 142 La. 577, 77 So. 287.

[b] Case Erroneously Appealed Directly to Supreme Court.—When the only ground for a direct appeal to the supreme appellate court is the constitutionality of a statute, and the statute in question has been repeatedly upheld by such court, it may order the case transferred to the lower court. *Strom v. 3. From Law to Equity and Vice Versa.—a. How Made.—A transfer of a cause from law to equity and from equity to law is generally merely a docket transfer, but a regular transfer from one court to another results when the courts of equity and law are entirely separate tribunals,<sup>35</sup> or when the receiving court exercises a superior equity jurisdiction.<sup>36</sup>

In the federal courts if an action at law should have been brought in equity, the objection may be obviated by amending the pleadings to conform to the proper practice at any stage of the cause.<sup>37</sup>

[a] This statute has been construed to mean (1) that the pleading may be amended, not that the cause may be transferred. Waldo v. Wilson, 231 Fed. 654, 145 C. C. A. 540. (2) The question is discussed in the briefs in In re Simons, 247 U. S. 231, 38 Sup. St. 497, 62 L. ed. 1094, but is not mentioned such a nature as to be properly cognizable in equity,<sup>38</sup> as, for example, where it involves the giving of relief not obtainable at law,<sup>39</sup> or the settlement of complicated accounts.<sup>40</sup> Matter set up by way of defense may authorize a transfer of the cause to equity.<sup>41</sup> A transfer should be refused when the case is not of equitable cognizance;<sup>42</sup> or is properly brought at law,<sup>43</sup> or when the only ground for the application is the possibility of an equitable issue arising upon a determination of a legal question,<sup>44</sup> and the court, in its discretion, may refuse a transfer, when in the court's opinion, the decision deciding merely the nature of the action and ordering a remand, not touching upon the power of the court to transfer from law to equity in a proper case. But that the right to transfer an equity case begun as an action at law existed prior to the enactment of this statute seems to be assumed without discussion in *Illinois Surety Co. v. arate actions, the bill may properly be dismissed. Clinton Min. & Mineral Co. v. Cochran, 247 Fed. 449, 159 C. C. A. 503.

[b] "The spirit and intendment is that the question by what tribunal the case should be decided is to be determined when the question can be decided in the full light of all the information obtainable. Plaintiff is to have accorded to it, its right to equitable relief in form and method of procedure, and the defendant is to be given full protection in the assertion of its right in a proper case to have it submitted to a jury. The question is one to be decided on its merits with no more regard to mere form of procedure than is required, and, whenever it appears that a case brought in equity should have been brought at law, full power is given to make the transfer." Goldschmidt Thermit Co. v. Primos Chem. Co., 225 Fed. 769, 775.

an issue of fact is raised which gives rise to the right of a trial by jury and the same is not waived.<sup>49</sup> Where the suit is essentially equitable it will not be transferred merely because an incidental issue is of a legal nature which can be determined in equity,<sup>50</sup> and when a party has no rights at law which equity cannot also give him, a transfer is within the court's discretion.<sup>51</sup>

B. PROCEEDINGS TO EFFECT TRANSFER.—1. In General.—The proceeding to transfer a cause, whether the transfer desired be from court to court, or from one department to another, or merely on the docket, should be in compliance with the statute,<sup>52</sup> or rules of court,<sup>53</sup> on which it is based.

2. Jurisdiction to Order.—Which court may direct a transfer is always designated by the rule or statute authorizing a transfer.<sup>54</sup> As a general rule the power rests in the court in which the cause is pending,<sup>55</sup> but in certain cases the transfer may be ordered by another court.<sup>56</sup>

3. At Whose Instance.—Court on Its Own Motion.—When the right to have a cause transferred is not limited to the parties, the court may act of its own motion.<sup>57</sup>

Irwin v. Deming, 142 Iowa 299, 120 N. W. 645.

[b] Adequate Legal Remedy.—When there is a complete and adequate remedy at law, the proper procedure is to transfer the case to a law court or the law side of the docket. Parkerson v. Borst, 251 Fed. 242, 163 C. C. A. 398; Fay v. Hill, 249 Fed. 415, 161 C. C. A. 389.

case.<sup>70</sup> But when there is no real ground for equity retaining jurisdiction an application for a transfer to law may be made at any stage of the proceeding.<sup>71</sup>

c. Form and Sufficiency. — The application is usually made by motion or petition,<sup>72</sup> showing that the cause is one which may be transferred,<sup>73</sup> and also the grounds on which the removal is sought.<sup>74</sup>

5. Notice of Application. — Reasonable notice of the application for transfer is generally required to be given to the adverse party,<sup>75</sup> but under some statutes providing for a transfer when a case has been pending for a certain period of time the motion may be made and granted without notice.<sup>76</sup>

8. Certification of Record.—All the papers and documents making up the file of the case, together with a certified transcript of the record pertaining thereto, under the seal of the court, when required by the statute authorizing the transfer, must be delivered to the clerk of the court to which the transfer is made.<sup>83</sup> The clerk of the court from which the transfer is ordered should act promptly in certifying the record,<sup>84</sup> but if he delays, his failure to act within a required time is merely an irregularity which cannot affect the jurisdiction of the court to which the transfer is made.<sup>85</sup>

C. EFFECT OF APPLICATION AND TRANSFER.—1. Effect of Application.—Under certain statutes the filing of an application for transfer of a case, with the required undertaking, arrests or halts the jurisdiction and the court has no power to act or make any order in the case until the undertaking is approved or disapproved and the motion disposed of.<sup>86</sup>

2. Effect of Order of Transfer.—The entry of the order of transfer operates to deprive the court making it of jurisdiction over the cause,<sup>87</sup> and to empower the court to which it is transferred to proceed with the case as if it had been originally instituted therein.<sup>88</sup> Where a transfer from equity to law is effected by an amendment of the plead-

[c] Defects in Petition to Transfer. (1) If the statute is not followed in all particulars and the respondent answers without objecting to the petition any irregularity therein will be deemed waived. Gurley v. Bushnell (Ala.), 76 So. 324. (2) An objection to the petition must be made before a decision is rendered thereon. Kraus v. Lehman, 170 Ind. 408, 83 N. E. 714, 84 N. E. 769.

filing briefs or pleadings in the cause after transfer,<sup>8</sup> by going to trial,<sup>9</sup> or any other action inconsistent with an intention to insist upon the irregularity.<sup>10</sup>

IV. CRIMINAL CAUSES.—A. IN GENERAL.—In criminal cases, as in civil cases,<sup>11</sup> a transfer from one court to another is, as a general rule, not permissible in the absence of statutory authority,<sup>12</sup> but in various jurisdictions authority to transfer in certain cases to and from designated courts is given by statute.<sup>13</sup> The statute, being regarded as remedial, are liberally construed.<sup>14</sup>

B. TO AND FROM WHAT COURTS.—1. In Federal Courts.—The federal statutes provide that in federal district courts of districts divided by law into two or more divisions, a criminal case may, on the defendant's application, be transferred for trial from one division to another,<sup>15</sup> and in districts of only one division, the court may of its

[a] By Implication.—When a new county is created and exclusive jurisdiction is conferred upon its courts of all pending cases which arose within its territory, but no order transferring such cases is directed to be made, the power to make the transfer must be implied. Appeal of Lay, 150 Ky. 448, 150 S. W. 529.

[b] Constitutionality.—Where one court is vested by the constitution with jurisdiction of a cause, a law which seeks to make the transfer of such cause to another court mandatory is unconstitutional and void. Williams v. State, 11 Ga. App. 240, 75 S. E. 141.

[c] The king's bench in England has long possessed the power to transfer criminal causes from other courts and to try the issues in banc or at nisi prius; and since the 14 Henry VI., c. 1, the judges at nisi prius, after a verdict of guilty, may either pass sentence and award execution, or return the case to the king's bench for judgment to be given there. Com. v. Simpson, 2 Grant (Pa.) 438.

[b] The purpose of the statute is to facilitate the disposition of criminal cases, especially minor cases, in which defendants are unable to give bail and might be compelled, where court is held in a certain district but once a year, to remain in jail a long time before trial. United States v. Sutherland, 214 Fed. 320.

[c] This provision applies only to districts which are subdivided by statute into divisions. United States v. Sutherland, 214 Fed. 320.

own motion, transfer the case from one place of holding trial to another.<sup>16</sup> When a district or division is newly created, or changed, prosecutions for crimes or offenses committed prior thereto are continued without interruption, unless the court, on the defendant's application, orders the case transferred to the new district or division.<sup>17</sup>

2. In State Courts.—The state courts to and from which criminal causes may be transferred are indicated by the statutes,<sup>18</sup> a transfer for jurisdictional reasons being, as a rule, to a court having exclusive jurisdiction of the offense,<sup>19</sup> as when an indictment or presentment for a misdemeanor is transferred from a superior to an inferior court,<sup>20</sup> or when, on appeal to the highest appellate court the errors assigned relate to questions reviewable only in a lower court of appeals.<sup>21</sup> Transfers to expedite the trial,<sup>22</sup> or because of the disqualification of the judge,<sup>23</sup> are made to courts of concurrent jurisdiction.

C. WHAT CAUSES TRANSFERRED.—The statutes authorizing the transfer of criminal causes vary in their phraseology and limitations, some applying to all cases; others to all criminal cases, causes, pending causes, felonies, misdemeanors, indictments and presentments, etc.<sup>24</sup>

[d] A rule of court creating departments in a district for the purpose of holding trials at different places, does not, by reason of an accident of phraseology in calling these departments "divisions," bring such district within the statute. United States v. Sutherland, 214 Fed. 320.

A statute, authorizing the transfer of misdemeanors, cannot be applied to felonies;<sup>25</sup> but when the statute is general in its terms, specifying no particular class of offenses, it applies alike to felonies and misdemeanors.<sup>26</sup>

D. GROUNDS. — Unless a transfer is effected by operation of law,<sup>27</sup> it must be based on one or more of the statutory grounds,<sup>28</sup> such as lack of jurisdiction,<sup>29</sup> or the disqualification of the judge,<sup>30</sup> or an overcrowded docket,<sup>31</sup> or to expedite the trial of criminals in jail,<sup>32</sup> or to obtain the opinion of a higher court on novel, important, and difficult questions involved.<sup>33</sup>

E. PROCEEDINGS TO EFFECT TRANSFER. — 1. In General. — The method of proceeding to effect a transfer of a criminal cause is generally prescribed in the statutes,<sup>34</sup> and substantial compliance therewith

[a] A statute referring to all cases includes criminal cases. Com. v. Simpson, 2 Grant (Pa.) 438, 443.

[b] The word "cause" is defined as being any suit or action, or any question, civil or criminal, contested before a court or justice. Ex parte Copeland, 5 Okla. Crim. 551, 115 Pac. 627. See also the title "Suits and Actions."

[c] "Pending causes" includes cases which have been commenced by filing in court an indictment, information, or complaint, but in which process has not been served upon the defendant. Bryant v. State, 158 Ala. 26, 48 So. 543.

[d] Authority to transfer indictments does not include informations. Kester v. State, 6 Okla. Crim. 741, 116 Pac. 356; Wychoff v. State, 6 Okla. Crim. 122, 116 Pac. 355.

[e] As to One or All Defendants. Under a statute providing for a transfer in order to have a speedy trial of an accused unable to furnish bail, when several defendants are jointly indicted and all but one give bail the case may be transferred as to such defendant without including the others. *State v. [a] Magistrate a Witness.—That a justice is a material witness for the defendant is not a good ground for transferring the cause to another justice for a preliminary examination. People v. Duncan, 97 Mich. 632, 57 N. W. 191.

[b] Convenience is not a good ground for a transfer when not given by the statute, and a criminal case must be remanded which is transferred to a newly created court of a new county merely because the defendant and witnesses reside in the new county, and also because the docket of the newly created court is not crowded. Appeal of Lay, 150 Ky. 448, 150 S. W. 529.

is necessary.<sup>35</sup> Mere irregularities in the transfer which in no way affect the substantial rights of the accused do not prevent the receiving court from acquiring jurisdiction.<sup>36</sup>

2. Jurisdiction to Order.— Ordinarily the statutes give the power of transfer to the court, or judges thereof,<sup>37</sup> and under such statutes a transfer can take place only when specially allowed by such court, or the judges thereof, and cannot be made by the state's attorney, nor on his authority.<sup>38</sup>

3. At Whose Instance.— The court may in certain cases transfer the cause on its own motion.<sup>39</sup> As a general rule statutes providing for the transfer of criminal cases are enacted for the benefit of the accused and are generally invoked by him,<sup>40</sup> but in some cases the state is equally benefited and entitled, in consequence, to apply for a transfer.<sup>41</sup> The consent of the accused may be necessary to a transfer on application of the prosecution.<sup>42</sup>

4. Time of Application.— The application for transfer of the cause should be seasonably made,<sup>43</sup> otherwise the court may in its discretion deny it, unless the delay is excused.<sup>44</sup>

5. Notice of Application.— When the state is given the privilege of transferring a criminal case from one court to another, and notice to the defendant is not provided for by the statute, it may be done without notice.<sup>45</sup>

6. Order of Transfer. — a. Necessity for. — As a general rule an order of court is necessary to effect a transfer,<sup>46</sup> although in certain cases an order may be unnecessary,<sup>47</sup> as where a statute, without requiring an order of transfer, directs that certain indictments returnable to one court shall be tried in another.<sup>48</sup> But in such a case, when the statute expressly requires an order, such order, once made, has been held sufficient for all future cases and need not be repeated.<sup>49</sup>

b. When Order May Be Made. — The order may be made in term time or vacation, unless a particular time is designated by the statute,<sup>50</sup> and when a motion for transferring a case is unavoidably delayed until the trial has commenced, the order granting a transfer may be made nunc pro tunc as of the time of pleading.<sup>51</sup>

c. Form and Sufficiency. — The order must name the court to which the transfer is made,<sup>52</sup> or otherwise show a transfer made to the proper court.<sup>53</sup> It must also show what particular case was transferred,<sup>54</sup> but need not designate the offence charged.<sup>55</sup> It should be based upon the indictment transferred,<sup>56</sup> and the court to which a transfer is made is without jurisdiction where the order of transfer is entitled as against the defendant, while the transcript shows an indictment against another person.<sup>57</sup> Such order should be entered on the minutes of both courts,<sup>58</sup> but this provision is directory and not a condition precedent to the court's acquiring jurisdiction.<sup>59</sup>

7. Transcript or Record.—A copy of the record and of all papers of the case must be sent to or filed in the receiving court,<sup>60</sup> and such transcript should contain an accurate and complete history of the case from its inception to the time of its transfer,<sup>61</sup> the order of transfer being properly included, but not necessarily so unless required by the statute.<sup>62</sup> Likewise, when required, it should be certified<sup>63</sup> and sealed<sup>64</sup> before leaving the court making the transfer,<sup>65</sup> and actually delivered to the receiving court<sup>66</sup> by the clerk of the transferring court.<sup>67</sup>

8. Costs.—Costs of transferring a criminal cause are generally charged against the party on whose application the transfer is made,<sup>68</sup> and in the case of a transfer by operation of law to a court in a newly created county the costs should be paid by the county from which the removal is made.<sup>69</sup>

F. WAIVER.—The right to transfer a criminal cause may be waived<sup>70</sup> by failure to assert it at the proper time;<sup>71</sup> and defects in a transfer which are merely irregularities, and do not affect the court's jurisdiction of the offense, are waived by failure to make a proper objection.<sup>72</sup>

G. RETRANSFER.—A case improperly transferred may be remanded,<sup>73</sup> or the order of transfer may be set aside on reasonable notice by the court which made it and which has jurisdiction of the case.<sup>74</sup>

I. PRELIMINARY MATTERS.—A preliminary charge of treason should be accompanied by an affidavit,—supported by proof showing probable cause,—alleging all the elements of the offense.<sup>1</sup> The accused is entitled to a copy of the jury panel and the indictment,<sup>2</sup> and to release upon furnishing satisfactory bail.<sup>3</sup>

II. JURISDICTION AND VENUE.<sup>4</sup>—The federal,<sup>5</sup> and not the state<sup>6</sup> courts have jurisdiction of the crime of treason against the United States, but for treason solely against a state the state courts have jurisdiction.<sup>7</sup> The venue of the offense of treason against the

[a] Merger of Treason Against State and Union.—The federal district courts have jurisdiction of an offense of treason begun against a state but which becomes converted or changed into an act of treason against the United States, such as the forcible overthrow of the state government and then the withdrawal of the state from the union, this being treason against the United States. In re Charge to Grand Jury, 1 Story 614, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 18,275.

[b] Offering resistance to federal troops, duly sent by the President into a state to protect such state from domestic violence, is treason against the United States and within the jurisdiction of the federal courts. In re Charge to Grand Jury, 1 Story 614, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 18,275.

[a] Treason Against State.—Thus if the object of an assembly of persons is to overturn, with force, the government or constitution of a state, or to prevent the due exercise of its sovereign powers, or to resist the ex-

United States may be laid in any district where the overt act is committed.<sup>8</sup>

III. INDICTMENT.<sup>9</sup> — The overt acts must be specially laid in an indictment for treason,<sup>10</sup> and it is not sufficient to allege generally that the accused had levied war against the United States.<sup>11</sup> But when written or oral words are laid as the overt act, it is sufficient to state their substance.<sup>12</sup>

Trial.<sup>13</sup> — While in contemplation of the law all who participate in the crime of treason are principals,<sup>14</sup> the conviction of one who has committed an act of treason, unless otherwise provided by statute,<sup>15</sup> must precede the trial of one who has merely advised or procured it.<sup>16</sup> As to the province of court and jury,<sup>17</sup> instructions,<sup>18</sup> verdict,<sup>19</sup>

I. REMEDIES GENERALLY. — The remedy of a person injured by a trespass may, under proper circumstances, be either at law or in equity.<sup>1</sup> At law, he may maintain an action of trespass,<sup>2</sup> or under certain circumstances he may bring an action of trover, or replevin,<sup>3</sup> or trespass on the case.<sup>4</sup> It is a general rule, that a trespass cannot be waived and assumpsit brought on an implied promise.<sup>5</sup> This may be done in certain cases, however,<sup>6</sup> as where chattels had and received by a wrong, are sold either for money or other property, or where their form is changed.<sup>7</sup>

The fact that the trespass may amount to a crime does not bar the civil remedy under the modern practice.<sup>8</sup>

II. THE ACTION OF TRESPASS. — A. GENERALLY. — The action of trespass is a remedy for a tort committed with force, the immediate and direct consequence of which is injury.<sup>9</sup> Trespass lies

[a] "The terms 'immediate' and 'consequential' should . . . be understood, not in reference to the time for injury to the person, for injury to personal property, and for injury to real property; the species being known respectively as trespass vi et armis,<sup>10</sup> trespass vi et armis de bonis asportatis, or commonly trespass de bonis asportatis,<sup>11</sup> and trespass quare clausum fregit.<sup>12</sup>

The action of trespass will not lie if the injury is consequential whether it results from the negligent or wilful act of the defendant;<sup>13</sup> or if the wrong complained of is a nonfeasance;<sup>14</sup> or if the matter affected is intangible,<sup>15</sup> or the right affected is incorporeal.<sup>16</sup> But when the injury which forms the gist of the action is both immediate and forcible or wilful, trespass is the only remedy.<sup>17</sup> When an injury is the direct and immediate and inevitable result of negligence, trespass will lie according to most authorities,<sup>18</sup> and according to some,

which the act occupies, or the space through which it passes, or the place from which it is begun, or the intention with which it is done, or the instrument or agent employed, or the lawfulness or unlawfulness of the act; but in reference to the progress and termination of the act, to its being done on the one hand, and its having been done on the other. If the injury is inflicted by the act at any moment of its progress, from the commencement to the termination thereof, then the injury is direct or immediate; but if it arises after the act has been completed, though occasioned by the act, then it is consequential or collateral, or, more exactly, a collateral consequence." Jordan v. Perry, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 569.

quare clausum fregit may be brought to recover mesne profits.<sup>33</sup> This action may be brought after a determination of a party's right of possession to the premises,<sup>34</sup> and after reentry,<sup>35</sup> or after a regaining of possession by re-entry without such a determination.<sup>36</sup>

33. Young v. Downey, 145 Mo. 261, 46 S. W. 962; Thompson v. Bower, 60 Barb. (N. Y.) 463.

[a] History and Nature of.—Originally, at common law, rents and profits were recovered in ejectment as damages. But when the pleadings became fictitious and the damages nominal, the courts allowed the application of the common law action of trespass vi et armis. The trespass is not more insisted upon than the ejectment. The former lay against a tenant holding over on his being ousted as well as against one who entered under a contract for a deed and refused to perform. While possession prior to the suit is always held to be necessary, an actual recovery of it by ejectment is not. It is enough if it be surrendered or obtained by a re-entry. In evading the requirement of injury to the plaintiff's possession so as to make the remedy adequate to all cases, the courts held that when the owner re-enters, his entry relates back to the time when his right accrued and converts the disseizin of the defendant into a trespass. Phillips v. Stewart, 87 Mo. App. 486.

[b] Trespass for mesne profits differs from an action for use and occupation in this, that the latter is founded upon a promise express or implied, while the former springs from a trespass, an entry vi et armis, upon the premises and a tortious holding. Young v. Downey, 145 Mo. 261, 46 S. W. 962. See also Schradsky v. Stimson, 76 Fed. 730, 22 C. C. A. 515; Thompson v. Bower, 60 Barb. (N. Y.) 463.

34. Western Book & Stat. Co. v. Jevne, 78 Ill. App. 668. See 19 STANDARD PROC. 774.

[a] A judgment in ejectment is not necessary as a basis for the action. The right of possession of the plaintiff and not necessarily his title to the premises is all that need be determined as a preliminary basis of the action.

A judgment of forcible detainer is sufficient for this purpose. Western Book & Stat. Co. v. Jevne, 78 Ill. App. 668, affirmed in 179 Ill. 71, 53 N. E. 565.

[a] Trespass and Trover Compared.

(1) Trespass is a remedy for a wrong committed by the direct force of the malfeasor, and includes, at common law, not only redress to the plaintiff but punishment of the defendant, and the defendant was imprisoned until he paid the fine. Trover is a remedy for a tort not committed with force. The judgment in the latter was a miseria cordia and the defendant was amerced. Hunt v. Pratt, 7 R. I. 283. (2) The action of trover is consistent with the idea that the defendant came into the possession of the goods without wrong, and that he converted them to his own use. But trespass de bonis is for a tortious or unlawful taking of a chattel out of possession of another. Kissam v. Roberts, 6 Bosw. (N. Y.) 154. (3) A mere seizure or unlawful handling may amount to trespass, while conversion is usually characterized by a usurpation of ownership. Montgomery Water Power Co. v. Chapman & Co., 126 Fed. 68, 78, 61 C. C. A. 124.

[b] A judgment in trespass does not transfer title to the subject-matter involved; but it is otherwise in trover. May v. Georger, 21 Misc. 622, 47 N. Y. Supp. 1057.

[c] Where a defendant causes goods in the possession of an officer to be levied on wrongfully, the owner's remedy is not trespass, but trover. Hunt v. Pratt, 7 R. I. 283.

42. Broadwater v. Darne, 10 Mo. 277, bare possession without right will not support replevin.

43. Painter v. Baker, 16 Ill. 103; Kelly v. Lett, 35 N. C. 50. See 4 STANDARD PROC. 614, and supra, this section.

[a] But an option of declaring in trespass or case (1) sometimes exists. Colo.—Letson v. Brown, 11 Colo. App. 11, 52 Pac. 287. N. C.—Kelly v. Lett, 35 N. C. 50. Vt.—Waterman v. Hall, 17 Vt. 128, 42 Am. Dec. 484. See 4 STANDARD PROC. 634. (2) Where injury is directly inflicted by a forcible act; as where a blow is given to a person, trespass is the only remedy. But if a forcible injury is effected by means flowing from the act of the defendant, but not operating by the very force or impulse of that act, either trespass or case may be maintained, in the first case treating those means as attached to and forming part of defendant's act, and in the second, treating the injury as consequential. Thus either trespass or case would have been appropriate in the lighted squib case. Waterman v. Hall, 17 Vt. 128, 42 Am. Dec. 484. And see supra, II, A.

G. JURISDICTION AND VENUE.<sup>51</sup>—Actions for damages for trespass are within the jurisdiction of courts of general jurisdiction,<sup>52</sup> and of justices of the peace, provided, in the latter case, title is not drawn in issue.<sup>53</sup>

According to the common law and the decisions following it, the action of trespass to realty is local,<sup>54</sup> and must be brought not only in the state where the land lies,<sup>55</sup> but must be brought or tried in the county where the land or some part thereof is situated also,<sup>56</sup> unless

[b] When goods are held by an officer under a writ of attachment, the owner cannot maintain trespass against mediate possession<sup>66</sup> at the time of the trespass,<sup>67</sup> or, in other words, he must have either actual or constructive possession.<sup>68</sup> The circumstance may be such, it seems, that either of two persons may bring the action, one suing by virtue of his actual possession, the other by virtue of his constructive possession.<sup>69</sup>

(II.) Actual Possession. — As against a wrongdoer it is not necessary in an action of trespass that the plaintiff in possession of the property at the time of the trespass should have the legal title to the goods and chattels,<sup>70</sup> or that his possession be rightful as against the true owner.<sup>71</sup> Bare possession suffices as against a mere trespasser.<sup>72</sup> But as against the true owner with the right to immediate possession, bare possession is not sufficient to sustain the action. In such case, proof of ownership in the defendant and right to possession constitutes a perfect defense.<sup>73</sup> If, however, the plaintiff has a special property in the thing which is the subject of the trespass, and a right to possession, he may maintain an action of trespass, even against the general owner, general property in such case being no excuse or justification for a trespass.<sup>74</sup> In such case, the owner's right to possession one attaching the property under a subsequent writ. Hunt v. Pratt, 7 R. L. 283.

conditional sale of personal property, by which the possession is to remain in the purchaser until the time for payment, maintain an action of trespass against one taking it before that time.<sup>86</sup>

(III.) Constructive Possession.—When the owner of a chattel has a right to an immediate and actual possession, his right gives him a constructive possession sufficient to sustain trespass.<sup>87</sup> He may have such constructive possession when the chattel is in possession of no one,<sup>88</sup> or when the goods are in the wrongful possession of a trespasser,<sup>89</sup> or when the goods are in the care and custody of a servant,<sup>90</sup> or agent,<sup>91</sup> or when the goods are in the hands of a bailee or factor and the owner is entitled to immediate possession.<sup>92</sup> In determining whether a plaintiff, by reason of his being the real owner of the goods has such a constructive possession as to enable him to maintain trespass, it is necessary to inquire whether there is any bar to his taking actual possession.<sup>93</sup> If the bailee has a right exclusively to use the thing for a given time, the inference of constructive possession is rebutted, and the general owner cannot maintain trespass before the expiration of the bailee's term, as his possession is in reversion only.<sup>94</sup> But a claim of the bailee for storage, commissions, or a lien upon the goods does not preclude an action of trespass de bonis by the owner, as the claim or lien may be waived by the bailee or cancelled at once by payment, and the defendant who is a stranger to the goods will not be heard to urge that the bailee has a claim or lien.<sup>95</sup>

In accordance with these rules, a bailor may maintain an action of trespass when the act of the bailee ipso facto terminates his right to possession and revives the right of the owner to immediate possession,<sup>96</sup> or where the bailment is gratuitous.<sup>97</sup> Perhaps the action may be brought by either party in the latter case.<sup>98</sup> So also an action of trespass may be maintained by an owner of goods who has parted with his possession to a carrier.<sup>99</sup> A sale of a chattel without delivery gives the vendee a constructive possession sufficient to maintain trespass.<sup>1</sup> With respect to mortgages of personalty, the general rule, in the absence of a contrary stipulation or reservation, is that the mortgagee has a right to immediate possession,—constructive pos-

[a] Reason of Rule.—The lien of a factor does not dispossess the owner, until the right is exerted by the factor. It is a privilege which he may avail himself of or not, as he pleases. It continues only while the factor has the possession, and therefore if he pledges the goods for his own debt, or suffers them to be attached, or otherwise parts with them voluntarily, the lien is lost, and the owner may trace and recover them, or he may sue in trespass if they are forcibly taken, for his constructive possession continued notwithstanding the lien. *Holly v. session,—though the property be in the actual possession of the mortgagor.<sup>2</sup> If, however, the mortgage authorizes the retention of possession by the mortgagor, the mortgagee cannot maintain trespass.<sup>3</sup> For the same reason a pledgor cannot maintain trespass.<sup>4</sup>

c. Trespass to Real Property.—(I.) Generally.—To support trespass quare clausum fregit, the plaintiff must have been in actual or constructive possession of the premises at the time of the trespass thereon.<sup>5</sup> He must either have actual possession, or the immediate right to it, flowing from the right of property.<sup>6</sup> If he has neither, he cannot maintain this action, even though he is the general owner of the premises trespassed upon.<sup>7</sup> As a general rule, it may be stated that if the premises trespassed upon are actually occupied, an action of trespass must be brought by the person in possession.<sup>8</sup>

(II.) Actual Possession. — It is well settled that peaceable possession of land is sufficient to maintain an action of trespass quare clausum fregit against a wrongdoer, or against all the world except the person having the right of possession,<sup>10</sup> without regard to whether the plaintiff had title to the land at the time of the trespass,<sup>11</sup> or whether or not the plaintiff's title is defeasible.<sup>12</sup> A wrongdoer or intruder cannot show a want of title in a plaintiff in actual possession,<sup>13</sup> even in mitigation of damages,<sup>14</sup> unless he connects himself with it.<sup>15</sup> Or as the rule is frequently stated, as against a wrongdoer, any possession is a legal possession.<sup>16</sup>

As against a wrongdoer, or every one whose right is not superior to the plaintiff's, it is not necessary that the plaintiff's possession be rightful. In such case, a tortious possession will support the action. The defendant is not allowed to justify his own wrong by showing the plaintiff's wrong, unless he connects himself with the true title.<sup>17</sup>

As against the true owner, or other person having the right to immediate possession, bare possession is not sufficient to enable the plaintiff in trespass to recover,<sup>18</sup> even though force is used by the owner in retaking possession and the use of force is prohibited by statute,<sup>19</sup> though in the latter case some authorities are to the contrary.<sup>20</sup> While undisputed possession in the plaintiff is in itself prima facie proof that he has such title as to authorize a suit by him,<sup>21</sup> such possession throws upon the defendant the burden of proving a better title, and a possessory right.<sup>22</sup> The defendant then may dispute the plaintiff's possessory right by showing that the title and possessory right are vested in himself, or another under whom he claims, or whose authority he has,<sup>23</sup> ownership and a right to enter at the time in question constituting a perfect defense to the action.<sup>24</sup> To succeed in the action, the plaintiff must prove such a legal possession as the defendant has no right to disturb.<sup>25</sup>

If, however, a person has a special property in the premises with the right of possession, he may maintain an action of trespass against any one disturbing his possession, even though the trespasser is the general owner of the premises.<sup>26</sup>

[a] Rationale of Rule.—The rule of law that the owner of land cannot take or retake possession of his own land by force applies to actions of trespass de bonis asportatis, trespass to the person, or forcible entry, but it does not apply to trespass quare clausum fregit. It is a perfect defense to the latter action to show that the defendant owns the land in question, and that he had, at the time in question, a right to enter. The fact that he entered by force, over the protest of the plaintiff does not destroy his defense. If he uses more force than is necessary and injures the person or property of the plaintiff, he is liable in an appropriate action, but that action is not trespass quare clausum fregit. This action is to recover damages as for injury to the land. If the plaintiff did not own the land, and his possession was wrongful, he could not suffer any damages, so far as the land was concerned, whatever damages he may have otherwise suffered in person or estate. *Southern Ry. [a] A person who has acquired title by adverse possession may maintain trespass against one with a perfect paper title to the land, when his possession is disturbed by the latter. Hughes v. Graves, 39 Vt. 359, 94 Am. Dec. 331.

What constitutes actual possession depends somewhat upon the character of the land in dispute, the purpose for which it is used, and the condition in which it is permitted and desired to remain.<sup>27</sup> An actual pedis possessio is not necessary in all cases.<sup>28</sup> And exclusive use and possession of the premises is not requisite.<sup>29</sup> However, a possessor, without title, possesses only within the limit of his inclosures, and cannot maintain trespass for acts committed beyond such inclosures.<sup>30</sup>

(III.) Constructive Possession.—Under modern practice, constructive possession of the premises trespassed upon is sufficient to sustain an action of trespass quare clausum fregit.<sup>31</sup> Constructive possession of real property is that possession which exists in contemplation of law without actual personal occupancy of the property, or which the law annexes to legal title or ownership when there is a right to actual possession, but no actual possession.<sup>32</sup>

Thus, when the premises trespassed upon are unoccupied, the general owner is deemed to be in constructive possession and entitled to maintain an action of trespass.<sup>33</sup> In such case, the plaintiff must cupancy, however, for the purpose of making a survey or taking off timber by one having no right of possession, is not such an actual occupancy as defeats the constructive possession of the owner.<sup>41</sup>

According to many authorities, where there is a tenancy at will, the landlord has such possession that he can maintain trespass, if the injury is to the freehold.<sup>42</sup>

(IV.) Application of Rules. — (A.) GENERALLY. — The general rules above stated have been applied to a mortgagor,<sup>43</sup> a licensee,<sup>44</sup> and a lienholder<sup>45</sup> in possession. But a remainderman or reversioner cannot maintain trespass, there being no possession.<sup>46</sup>

possession,<sup>52</sup> or unless, according to some authorities, the tenancy is at will and there is an injury to the reversion,<sup>53</sup> though even in the latter case the landlord can not sue if a notice to terminate the tenancy is required.<sup>54</sup> In the case of a tenant at will, the possession may be considered as in either the lessor or lessee,<sup>55</sup> and either the tenant,<sup>56</sup> or the landlord,<sup>57</sup> or both<sup>58</sup> may have actions of trespass against a stranger and recover damages according to their several losses.<sup>59</sup> So also, a landlord may sue a tenant at will in trespass for voluntary waste, as that terminates the lease.<sup>60</sup> There is, however, a distinction between renting the entire premises, and the renting of rooms in a building specifically. The owner in the latter case still has possession and may maintain trespass, especially if the building be destroyed.<sup>61</sup>

Where There Are Reservations or Restrictions. — If there is a reservation of trees or timber and the like in a lease, the lessor may maintain trespass for injury thereto.<sup>62</sup> There is a distinction, however, between a reservation and a mere restriction upon the tenant not to cut timber; the landlord in the latter case is deemed to have parted with possession and is therefore without right to maintain trespass.<sup>63</sup>

(C.) DISSEISIN. — Although a disseisee may maintain trespass for an act of disseisin and recover damages for the original entry,<sup>64</sup> he cannot, while he allows the disseisin to continue, maintain an action of trespass quare clausum fregit against the disseisor or his successor in title for any acts done subsequent to the disseisin.<sup>65</sup> But after

eral or special property in the personalty at the time of the trespass, or actual possession thereof.<sup>15</sup>

3. Description of Property.<sup>16</sup>—The property trespassed upon must be described whether it be realty,<sup>17</sup> or personalty.<sup>18</sup> In trespass to personal property, the quantity, number,<sup>19</sup> and value,<sup>20</sup> must be averred. Where a number of articles of different kinds are taken and the aggregate value of the whole is alleged, the number of articles of each description need not be stated,<sup>21</sup> unless it appears the plaintiff is able to give an accurate description.<sup>22</sup> And it has been held that where the items are given, the aggregate value of the whole may be alleged, without alleging the value of each separately.<sup>23</sup> In trespass de bonis, the place from which the goods are taken need not be described.<sup>24</sup>

[c] That goods were taken out of plaintiff's possession need not be alleged where plaintiff's property is alleged. Brown v. Arther, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 266; Donaghe v. Roudeboush, 4 Munf. (18 Va.) 251, the objection was raised on motion in arrest of judgment.

[d] That plaintiff was entitled to immediate possession of the chattel need not be alleged. Clague v. Hodgson, 16 Minn. 329. Compare Nachtrieb v. Stoner, 1 Colo. 423, and the title "Title." See also 22 STANDARD PROC. 921.

E. 411, where a cutting of all the timber including oak, poplar, pine, walnut, etc., of the value of $3000 was alleged.

But see Forbes v. Moore, 32 Tex. 195, holding an allegation of taking of all farming utensils and household and kitchen furniture of the value of $2000 is too indefinite.

22. Schneider v. Ferguson, 77 Tex. 572, 14 S. W. 154, holding an allegation of a seizure of stock consisting of salt, coal oil, etc., reasonably worth the sum of $600 was held insufficient, it being the duty of the officer to inventory the property taken.

In trespass quare clausum, it is not necessary to give a particular description of the premises<sup>25</sup> unless required by statute,<sup>26</sup> although it would undoubtedly be better practice to do so.<sup>27</sup> The premises may be designated by name,<sup>28</sup> or by some of the abutments,<sup>29</sup> or by some other sufficient description to identify it.<sup>30</sup> person,<sup>32</sup> or to personal,<sup>33</sup> or real<sup>34</sup> property. At common law that the injury was committed vi et armis and contra pacem should be alleged.<sup>35</sup> But this allegation is not necessary under the code in trespass quare clausum,<sup>36</sup> and generally it has long since lost its seeming importance.<sup>37</sup>

5. Time.—The date of the trespass must be alleged,<sup>38</sup> unless statute provides otherwise.<sup>39</sup> In a proper case, to prevent the bringing of several actions, the trespass may be laid with a continuando,<sup>40</sup> or described so that issue may be taken thereon. Snedecor v. Pope, 143 Ala. 275, 39 So. 318.

33. Bartlett v. Chaviers, 14 Ala. App. 279, 69 So. 975.

2. Liberum Tenementum.—A plea of liberum tenementum is a good plea in trespass quare clausum,<sup>68</sup> and may be pleaded with a plea of not guilty in some states.<sup>69</sup> This plea may be used where the declaration is very general in its description of the premises, as well as where it gives a particular description. In the former case, it compels the plaintiff to give a more definite description, or to new assign.<sup>70</sup> In the latter, it admits possession in the plaintiff of the premises described, sufficient to maintain the action,<sup>71</sup> and also the trespass al-

Pr. 467, where it was claimed the property was not exempt as against the judgment in question. (3) When the action is not brought by the defendant in execution, and it is claimed that the sale to the plaintiff is fraudulent as to judgment creditors, the judgment must be shown but it need not be pleaded. Ill.—*Jackson v. Where liberum tenementum is pleaded, see supra, II, K, 2.

[b] If the plea covers the trespass but mistakes it, (1) that it does not hit the whole or some part of the trespass the plaintiff intended in his declaration, the plaintiff must new assign to explain. Carpenter v. Barber, 44 Vt. 441; Waddell v. Corbett, 25 U. C. Q. B. (Can.) 234. See Cheswell v. Chapman, 42 N. H. 47. (2) Thus where, in trespass q. c. f. the plaintiff alleges an entry and other matters such as his expulsion from the premises, or the taking away of goods, leaving it equivocal whether one trespass with matter as aggravation or whether distinct trespasses are alleged, the defendant may answer only the trespass to the freehold. If the plaintiff wishes to recover for additional trespasses he must new assign and allege that he brought his action as well for the trespass mentioned in the plea as for the trespass new assigned. Carpenter v. Barber, 44 Vt. 441.

[c] New assignment in another part of the same close, as well as in a different close is permissible. In the latter case the new assignment should not contain a traverse. In the former case, the plaintiff should traverse title to

Rejoinders and subsequent pleadings should comply with the general rules elsewhere discussed.<sup>84</sup>

M. ISSUES, PROOF, AND VARIANCE. — 1. Issues.<sup>85</sup> — The good faith of the plaintiff's possession cannot be made an issue in an action of trespass.<sup>86</sup> And an issue on the force and arms is immaterial.<sup>87</sup>

The general issue puts in issue the facts necessary to constitute the trespass,<sup>88</sup> and under it matters in justification or excuse cannot be shown,<sup>89</sup> but matters in mitigation of damages may be shown.<sup>90</sup>

Title and Possession. — Under the general issue, at common law, the defendant in trespass quare clausum fregit may show title or possession in himself,<sup>91</sup> or those under whom he claims,<sup>92</sup> or he may show the part newly assigned only. Low v. Ross, 3 Me. 256.

[d] A new assignment amplifying the charge is not permissible. Stults v. Buckelew, 28 N. J. L. 150.

[e] Where a single trespass is charged, a reply traversing the justification and new assigns by setting up other trespasses is bad. Stults v. Buckelew, 28 N. J. L. 150. But see Robbins v. Wolcott, 19 Conn. 356.

84. See the title "Rejoinder and Subsequent Pleadings;" and Dolson v. Hill, 3 Houst. (Del.) 255; Low v. Ross, 3 Me. 256, a rejoinder of not guilty is proper where the plaintiff in the declaration does not describe the premise, where the defendant describes it particularly and asserts title, and where the plaintiff new assigns alleging trespass on and title to a part of the close.

But failure to prove circumstances of aggravation do not prevent a recovery of compensatory or nominal damages.<sup>5</sup> An allegation of a taking or entry by the defendant is supported by proof of a taking or entry by another under his direction.<sup>6</sup> If a forcible injury is declared on, a recovery cannot be had on proof of negligence, even under the code.<sup>7</sup> But where the distinction between trespass and case has been abolished, it has been held that although the claim is set forth as in trespass, proof as for case will authorize a recovery.<sup>8</sup>

JUDGMENT AND ITS ENFORCEMENT.—So also the judgment should follow the general rules elsewhere treated.<sup>33</sup> Some of the joint trespassers may be acquitted, and judgment rendered against the remainder.<sup>34</sup> But upon a joint issue, the judgment must be joint as to those found guilty,<sup>35</sup> unless the statute provides otherwise.<sup>36</sup> Ownership should not be adjudged or a judgment for the land rendered, where title is not in issue.<sup>37</sup>

Summit Lumber Co.*, 124 La. 270, 50 So. 35, the allegation of ownership being merely in aid of the action of trespass.

Effect of. — A judgment in trespass quare clausum fregit is conclusive upon the right of possession,<sup>38</sup> and determines only that a trespass has been committed on some part of the described premises.<sup>39</sup> It does not transfer the title to the subject-matter involved as in trover.<sup>40</sup> There is a conflict of authority as to the effect of the verdict and judgment on a plea of ownership.<sup>41</sup>

A writ of possession cannot issue under a judgment in trespass.<sup>42</sup>

P. NEW TRIAL. — A new trial may be granted in a proper case.<sup>43</sup>

Q. APPEAL AND ERROR.<sup>44</sup> — The action of trespass quare clausum is not within a statute conferring, upon an appellate court, jurisdiction in controversies concerning the title and boundaries of land,<sup>45</sup> even though title was drawn in question,<sup>46</sup> or a plea of liberum tenementum is filed;<sup>47</sup> but some courts hold otherwise in the latter case,<sup>48</sup> unless the defense is abandoned by a failure to offer proof under the plea.<sup>49</sup>

R. COSTS.<sup>50</sup> — Under some statutes, costs in trespass are not recoverable if the damages recovered are less than a prescribed amount, unless title to property is in question.<sup>51</sup>

III. ACTIONS FOR DOUBLE AND TREBLE DAMAGES AND PENALTIES. — A. GENERALLY. — Statutes frequently provide that for certain trespasses, rights of action for double and treble damages,<sup>52</sup> or for penalties,<sup>53</sup> shall exist. These statutes are cumulative and provide an additional, or rather an alternative, remedy to the owner of land trespassed upon;<sup>54</sup> but a resort to either remedy is a bar to the other.<sup>55</sup>

B. JURISDICTION AND VENUE.<sup>56</sup> — Jurisdiction over the action depends on the amount involved.<sup>57</sup>

C. FORM OF ACTION. — To recover the double or treble damages, the form of the action should be trespass,<sup>58</sup> and to recover the penalty provided, debt is a proper remedy.<sup>59</sup>

D. PARTIES. — Tenants in common deriving title from a common ancestor may and should join in an action for treble damages.<sup>60</sup>

E. PROCESS. — The process must conform to the general rules regulating process.<sup>61</sup>

52. See the statutes.

[a] A justice has jurisdiction of an action for treble damages where the amount of the single damages is within the limits of his jurisdiction, although by trebling the damages that limit is exceeded. Shrewsbury v. Bawlit, 57 Mo. 414, his power to treble the damages is derived from the trespass act, not from the justice's court act. But see 17 STANDARD PROC. 875.

[a] Action must be in contract to recover statutory penalty. Lott v. Leventhal, 80 N. J. L. 216, 76 Atl. 328.

[b] Nature of Action.—An action of debt for penalty for trespass is an action in tort, and the rule applying to tort actions obtains. Thus the plaintiff may discontinue as to some of the defendants and proceed against those remaining. Wright v. Sample, 162 Ala. 222, 50 So. 268. See also Crawford v. Slaton, 133 Ala. 393, 31 So. 940. But compare Higdon v. Kennemer, 120 Ala. 193, 24 So. 439.

[a] Indorsements.—(1) The name of the prosecutor and the title of the statute should be indorsed on process in debt for a penalty for cutting a tree. Miller v. Stoy, 5 N. J. L. 476. (2) But a summons in an action to recover treble damages need not be indorsed with a reference to the statute as the statute creates a forfeiture only but does not give the action. Sprague v. Irwin, 27 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 51.

F. PLEADINGS. — Declaration or Complaint. — In an action to recover multiple damages, the declaration or complaint should contain the allegations required in a complaint in trespass,<sup>62</sup> and allege, in addition, all the circumstances essential to support the action and to bring the case clearly within the statute.<sup>63</sup> But a statement of the cause of action in the language of the statute is sufficient.<sup>64</sup> The declaration must count upon the statute.<sup>65</sup> In doing so it is sufficient to conclude against the statute,<sup>66</sup> but such a conclusion is not necessary when it

[a] Only that which the jury reports as "damages" can be trebled, and the language of the verdict con-

ing single damages, to treble them themselves.<sup>76</sup> When several causes of action are joined, some only of which are under the statute, the verdict should distinguish how much of the award is for trespass.<sup>77</sup>

Exemption. — The action being tortious, no right of exemption exists against the judgment.<sup>78</sup>

IV. INJUNCTIVE RELIEF.<sup>79</sup> — A. AGAINST TRESPASS TO PERSONAL PROPERTY. — Ordinarily an injunction will not be awarded to restrain trespasses on personal property.<sup>80</sup>

B. AGAINST TRESPASS TO REAL PROPERTY. — 1. junctive relief is granted much more freely.<sup>85</sup>

Generally, to warrant equitable interference against trespasses two conditions must exist; first, the complainant's title must be established,<sup>86</sup> or at least he must have a prima facie title,<sup>87</sup> and secondly, there must be a ground for equitable relief,<sup>88</sup> such as the prevention of irreparable injury,<sup>89</sup> or inadequacy of legal remedy,<sup>90</sup> or a prevention of a multiplicity of suits,<sup>91</sup> all of which amount essentially to irreparable injury.<sup>92</sup> If the remedy at law is adequate, an injunction will not be granted,<sup>93</sup> and as an action for damages is usually an adequate remedy for a mere trespass, it is a general rule that an injunction against a mere threatened trespass will not be granted.<sup>94</sup>

2. Title in Plaintiff.—To warrant a permanent injunction against a trespass, not only must there be an equitable ground of relief,<sup>95</sup> but the complainant's title must be admitted,<sup>96</sup> or established by a legal hold that, having taken jurisdiction, they may award complete relief, even though they may have to try title or determine boundaries.<sup>2</sup>

3. Possession in Plaintiff.—To maintain a suit to enjoin a trespass, the plaintiff must have and allege possession of the premises,<sup>3</sup> unless statute provides otherwise,<sup>4</sup> or he must allege facts showing that he is entitled to an injunction without being in possession.<sup>5</sup> It is clear that the remedy by injunction cannot be substituted for ejectment or unlawful detainer.<sup>6</sup> But temporary injunctions are frequently granted to persons out of possession, until they can establish their title by a proper action.<sup>7</sup> And equity may be resorted to in the first instance to enjoin a trespasser in possession without right from committing irreparable injury.<sup>8</sup>

Some cases limit the term "irreparable injury" to cases of this character,<sup>11</sup> but generally the term is given a much broader signification.<sup>12</sup> And it is held that a trespass is irreparable and will be enjoined when from its nature full and complete reparation in damages cannot be made,<sup>13</sup> or when the injury is not capable of estimation in terms of money,<sup>14</sup> or according to some cases, when, although it may be thus atoned for, the party trespassing is insolvent.<sup>15</sup> Indeed, whenever the remedy at law is inadequate, equity will enjoin the trespass.<sup>16</sup>

b. Continuous and Repeated Trespasses.—For the purpose of preventing irreparable injury,<sup>17</sup> and of avoiding a multiplicity of suits,<sup>18</sup> an injunction will be granted to prevent continuous or repeated trespasses of the same person or of several persons,<sup>19</sup> of such a character

Contra, Tantlinger v. Sullivan, 80 Iowa 218, 45 N. W. 765 (irreparable injury need not be alleged); Lambert v. St. Louis & Gulf R. Co., 212 Mo. 692, 111 S. W. 550, damage is not "irreparable."

[a] The remedy at law (1) must be inadequate. Kramer v. Slattery, 260 Pa. 234, 103 Atl. 610. (2) The necessity of a multiplicity of suits shows the inadequacy of the legal remedy. Bettman v. Harness, 42 W. Va. 433, 26 S. E. 271, 36 L. R. A. 566. See Gilbert v. Arnold, 30 Md. 29.

[b] The classes of cases in which an injunction is granted include those where the facts give rise to interminable litigation if relief is not granted; or those where the facts show either torts inherently of a permanent character or circumstances strongly suggesting that the wrongs complained of would, in all probability, be repeated so continuously that by reason of their persistency in this respect, they in effect would be permanent in nature, and so harassing as to amount to a harmful nuisance, the damage from which could be estimated only by conjecture. In some of the cases, the facts show that the acts in question, if persisted in, would constitute a permanent use of or would be ruinous to or seriously interfere with the occupancy and enjoyment of plaintiff's real estate; others are instances of waste. Kramer v. Slattery, 260 Pa. 234, 103 Atl. 610.

[c] Where the repeated acts of trespass will ripen into a prescriptive right, an injunction will be granted though substantial damage is not done. Vestal v. Young, 147 Cal. 715, 82 Pac. 381; Mendelson v. McCabe, 144 Cal. 230, 77 Pac. 915, 103 Am. St. Rep. 78; Moore v. Clear Lake Water-Works, 68 Cal. 146, 8 Pac. 816; Richards v. Dower, 64 Cal. 62, 28 Pac. 113; Poirier v. Fetter, 20 Kan. 47.

[d] But a discharged employee will not be enjoined from occupying his former place, the injury not being irreparable. Mechanics' Foundry v. Ryall, 62 Cal. 416, 75 Cal. 601, 17 Pac. 703.

[e] Continuous trespasses upon barren or waste land of little value will not be enjoined. Hoye v. Sweetman, 19 Nev. 376, 12 Pac. 504; Thorn v. Sweeney, 12 Nev. 251; *Crescent Min. Co. v. be present,<sup>23</sup> or if the trespass is continuing or repeated,<sup>24</sup> the insolvency of the defendant is immaterial and need not be alleged.<sup>25</sup> But in such case the insolvency is an element to be taken into consideration in awarding relief. d. Other Grounds.—An injunction against trespasses may be granted when there exist circumstances which in the discretion of the court render the writ necessary,<sup>29</sup> and some statutes so provide.<sup>30</sup> The nonresidence of the defendant is entitled to considerable weight in determining the propriety of the injunction.<sup>31</sup> And if the plaintiff is under a legal disability so that he is unable to pursue a legal remedy otherwise adequate, an injunction against trespass may be had.<sup>32</sup>

5. Proceedings To Obtain Relief.—a. Generally.—An injunction against trespass may be obtained as an original proceeding,<sup>33</sup> or as ancillary to an action for damages.<sup>34</sup>

b. Jurisdiction and Venue.<sup>35</sup>—According to some authorities a suit to enjoin a trespass on real property is local,<sup>36</sup> and must be brought in the state in which the land lies.<sup>37</sup> But according to other authorities, following the general rule as to extraterritorial jurisdiction,<sup>38</sup> if the court has jurisdiction of the necessary parties, it may enjoin a trespass on lands in another state.<sup>39</sup> Where the action is local, under some statutes it must be brought in the county where the land lies,<sup>40</sup> but under other statutes it must be in the county in which the defendant resides.<sup>41</sup>

[b] An allegation is sufficient which states that the defendant has inflicted sustained by each act of trespass.<sup>57</sup> And a reference to the statute giving multiple damages and allegations attempting to state a cause of action thereunder may be treated as surplusage.<sup>58</sup>

Amendment. — The bill or petition may be amended in accord with the general rules.<sup>59</sup>

e. Relief Awarded. — The decree must conform to the allegations in the bill and the prayer.<sup>60</sup> And under a prayer for general relief, damages may be awarded for the injury done before the injunction is issued.<sup>61</sup> A mandatory injunction may be awarded in a proper case,<sup>62</sup> although, according to some authorities, in determining whether such an injunction will be granted, the court will balance the injuries.<sup>63</sup>

V. CRIMINAL PROSECUTION OF. — A. GENERALLY.<sup>64</sup> — Forcible trespass is an offense at common law.<sup>65</sup> And by virtue of statutory great damage on the plaintiff, and has not sufficient property, subject to execution, to respond to the judgments, should he be sued at law. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Scovill, 71 Conn. 136, 41 Atl. 246, 71 Am. St. Rep. 159, 42 L. R. A. 157.

63. See infra, this note.

[a] Balance of Injury. — When by innocent mistake, erections have been placed on plaintiff's land and when the damage to the plaintiff is greatly disproportionate to the damage which would be sustained by removing the structure, an injunction may be denied. Lynch v. Union Institution, 159 Mass. 306, 34 N. E. 364, 20 L. R. A. 842; Goldbacher v. Eggers, 38 Misc. 36, 76 N. Y. Supp. 881. But see Hennessy v. Carmony, 50 N. J. 64. See the titles, "Assault and Battery," "Forcible Entry and Detainer," "Malicious Mischief;" "Rescue."

65. See infra, this note.

[a] The only distinction between forcible trespass and forcible entry and detainer is that the former relates to personal property and the latter reenactment, trespasses after warning, and trespasses in removing produce from the lands of others, are sometimes made offenses.<sup>66</sup>

B. JURISDICTION AND VENUE. — Statutes sometimes confer exclusive jurisdiction of prosecutions for trespass upon justices of the peace.<sup>67</sup>

C. INDICTMENT, INFORMATION, AFFIDAVIT AND COMPLAINT. — 1. For Forcible Trespass. — An indictment for forcible trespass must charge a trespass which involves a breach of the peace or directly tends to it.<sup>68</sup> It must allege a taking of the chattels with a strong hand,<sup>69</sup> in the presence of the owner,<sup>70</sup> from his actual possession,<sup>71</sup> to his terror,<sup>72</sup> or against his will.<sup>73</sup> In forcible trespass to a dwelling house, the indictment must charge who was present at the time of the trespass.<sup>74</sup>

2. For Statutory Trespasses. — The affidavit or complaint which is the basis of a prosecution of a statutory trespass before an inferior court,<sup>75</sup> or the preliminary complaint and warrant,<sup>76</sup> and indictment lates to realty, but this distinction is not always observed. State v. Lawson, 123 N. C. 740, 31 S. E. 667, 68 Am. St. Rep. 844.

[a] Words of equivalent import may be used, as where it is alleged the taking was with a strong hand from the possession of the prosecutor, he being personally present and forbidding the same. State v. Armfield, 27 N. C. 207.

74. State v. Walker, 32 N. C. 234.

[a] Proof.—If the person alleged to be present was not present, the defendant must be acquitted. State v. Walker, 32 N. C. 234.

75. See the title, "Indictment and Information."

[a] Designation of offense by name (1) is sufficient. Randle v. State, 155 Ala. 121, 46 So. 759. (2) Whether the trespass was in entering after warning or in refusing to leave after warning need not be shown where the offense is designated by name. Randle v. State, 155 Ala. 121, 46 So. 759.

[b] A complaint for retaking possession of land, after being ejected by legal process need not show in what manner the defendant was dispossessed or the time thereof. Cofer v. State, 157 Ala. 10, 47 So. 1010. See also Wilson v. State, 115 Ala. 129, 22 So. 567.

76. See infra, this note, and the titles, "Indictment and Information;" "Warrants."

[a] The warrant may be amended by charging the entry was "wilful and unlawful." State v. Smith, 103 N. C. 410, 9 S. E. 200.

or information<sup>77</sup> therefor, when the trial is by indictment or information must charge the offense in accordance with the general rules relating thereto. Generally it is sufficient to describe the offense in the language of the statute,<sup>78</sup> except where the statute fails to specify the acts constituting the offense.<sup>79</sup>

The lands trespassed upon should be described.<sup>80</sup> Under statutes for trespassing on the land of another, the owner of the land trespassed upon must be designated, if known.<sup>81</sup> And in such case, it is generally sufficient to describe the land as that of some named person other than the defendant, situated in the county and state,<sup>82</sup> provided no provision

[a] An allegation of a trespass on the "premises" of a named person is sufficient, the words "premises" and "land" being now synonymous. State v. Yellowday, 152 N. C. 793, 67 S. E. 480. But see State v. French, 120 Ind. 229, 22 N. E. 108, explained and adhered to in Winlock v. State, 121 Ind. 531, 23 N. E. 514.

[b] That defendant had no bona fide claim to the land need not be averred under statute forbidding trespass on "land of another." State v. Whitehurst, 70 N. C. 85.

[c] Whether the land is enclosed or unenclosed need not be stated, as an entry is an offense in either case. State v. French, 120 Ind. 229, 22 N. E. 108.

for restoration of the property is made.<sup>83</sup> This is not sufficient, however, under a statute prohibiting trespass by a person on premises "not his own."<sup>84</sup>

If intent is an element of the offense it must be alleged.<sup>85</sup>

An indictment for trespass after warning must allege that the defendant entered upon the land<sup>86</sup> of a named person,<sup>87</sup> without his consent,<sup>88</sup> and, under some statutes, without a license therefor,<sup>89</sup> after being forbidden to do so,<sup>90</sup> or<sup>91</sup> that he remained on such land after a notification to depart.<sup>92</sup> In some states, the indictment should aver the trespass was committed within the statutory time after warning,<sup>93</sup> and must allege that the defendant is not an officer on lawful business.<sup>94</sup> Actual possession of the owner need not be shown.<sup>95</sup>

For Cutting Timber or Removing Produce From Land of Another, etc. The indictment for trespass upon property and cutting down timber, or removing produce, or detaching property from the freehold should allege the wrongful entry,<sup>96</sup> and the commission of the acts thereon prohibited by the statute.<sup>97</sup> Under some statutes, that the taking was without the consent of the owner must be alleged.<sup>98</sup> But the value of the timber cut down, or property removed need not be alleged,<sup>99</sup> unless made an element of the offense,<sup>1</sup> or a basis for the computation of damages.<sup>2</sup>

97. Johnson v. State, 68 Ind. 43, that corn was "growing on the stalk" must be alleged. See Mettler v. People, 135 Ill. 410, 25 N. E. 748, holding indictment sufficient.

Indorsements and Formal Requisites.—Some statutes require that the name of the prosecutor shall be indorsed on indictments for trespass, or that a statement, that it is founded on the testimony of witnesses other than the person injured, shall be made at the end thereof.<sup>3</sup>

D. ISSUES, PROOF AND VARIANCE.—The general rules as to issues, proof and variance in criminal cases apply to prosecutions for trespass.<sup>4</sup>

[a] Under a statute prohibiting the cutting "down" of trees, (1) an indictment charging the cutting of a tree merely is insufficient. Maskill v. State, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 299. (2) But an allegation of cutting down timber sufficiently shows it to have been standing or growing. Boarman v. State, 66 Ark. 65, 48 S. W. 899.

[b] Severance by defendant of fruit carried away need not be alleged. Long v. State, 42 Fla. 509, 28 So. 775.

[c] A charge of cutting down and carrying away is not duplicitous if it is one transaction. State v. Paul, 81 Iowa 596, 47 N. W. 773; State v. Myers, 20 Mo. 409.

[d] The specific injury to the property need not be alleged, cutting down and destroying being sufficiently specific. State v. Watrous, 13 Iowa 489.

[e] Omission of words "then and there" does not render indictment insufficient. Mettler v. People, 36 Ill. App. 324.

98. Com. v. Moore, 17 Ky. L. Rep. 212, 30 S. W. 873. But see Long v. State, 42 Fla. 509, 28 So. 775, holding an allegation of wilfulness precludes the idea of consent.

[a] Under a statute forbidding hunting on land without the consent of the owner, or the person in charge of the inclosure, want of consent of the person in charge as well as of the owner must be alleged, unless the owner is alleged to be in charge. State v. Sparrow, 52 Mo. App. 374; Holtzgraft v. State, 23 Tex. App. 404, 5 S. W. 117.

99. Boarman v. State, 66 Ark. 65, 48 S. W. 899.

1. McQueen v. State, 10 Ala. App. 244, 65 So. 310, value of property to the owner "before being detached from the freehold" must be stated.

2. State v. Grewell, 19 Kan. 189.

[a] Damage to owner need not be alleged where statute makes value of tree the basis of the penalty and the value is stated. State v. Shadley, 16 Ind. 230.

3. See the statutes and State v. Scott, 25 Ark. 107; State v. Brown, 10 Ark. 104; and 12 STANDARD PROC. 225, 233, et seq.

[a] Prosecutions for trespasses on state property are not within the statute. This exception applies to trespasses on Sixteenth sections. State v. Brown, 10 Ark. 104; State v. Roberts, 11 Mo. 510.

4. See the titles, "Arraignment and Plea;" "Trial;" "Variance and Failure of Proof."

[a] Issue as to Title.—In prosecutions for trespass after warning, the question of title or ownership of the property cannot ordinarily be inquired into. Withers v. State, 120 Ala. 394, 25 So. 568.

[b] A variance as to the location of the premises is fatal. Martin v. State, 89 Miss. 633, 42 So. 601.

[c] Ownership.—Where the land is alleged to be owned by two or more, proof of a trespass on the lands of either is insufficient. Eubank v. State, 105 Ga. 612, 31 S. E. 741.

[d] An indictment for trespass by entering after warning is not supported by proof of refusing to leave after warning. Brunson v. State, 140 Ala. 201, 37 So. 197.

[e] "Cutting down" and "Carrying Away."—An indictment for cutting down timber is not sustained by proof of carrying away only. State v. McConkey, 20 Iowa 574.

B. NATURE AND FORM OF REMEDY. — 1. Distress. — a. As Remedy of Landowner. — At common law, cattle damage feasant, that is doing damage, or trespassing upon land, could be distrained therefor,<sup>8</sup> and in some jurisdictions the proceeding, within certain limitations, is authorized by statute.<sup>9</sup> be replevied, or recovery had in trover for their conversion,<sup>11</sup> or the injured party may prosecute an ordinary action for damages for the distraint.<sup>12</sup>

(II.) Pleading.—The declaration in an action for damages based on wrongful distraint of trespassing animals, as in other civil actions, must state the necessary substantive facts of the plaintiff's cause of action,<sup>13</sup> and when a penalty is sought must be drawn under the statute which grants it.<sup>14</sup>

The plea of justification that the animals were taken damage feasant need not describe the land on which they were taken with particularity.<sup>15</sup> When the defendant justifies as an officer, he should aver his official character.<sup>16</sup> Notice to the plaintiff should be pleaded,<sup>17</sup> but not necessarily the manner in which it was given.<sup>18</sup>

(III.) Trial.<sup>19</sup>—Questions of Law and Fact.—The reasonable diligence of the defendant in the distress proceedings is, under conflicting evidence, for the jury.<sup>20</sup>

Instructions.—The charge in such cases, as in other civil actions, should be based on the law applicable to the case,<sup>21</sup> and an instruction is erroneous which assumes a right to distrain when such right is disputed.<sup>22</sup> sulted from the defendant's negligence,<sup>57</sup> appropriate and pertinent allegations must be made.

2. Plea or Answer.—A defense to the common law action of trespass quare clausum fregit in the nature of an excuse, as a defect in fences which the plaintiff was bound to repair, must be specially pleaded.<sup>58</sup> Where the trespass results from the removal of a partition fence, of which plaintiff was entitled to notice, that such notice was duly given should be pleaded.<sup>59</sup> Where the common law rule as to fences prevails and the trespassing animals enter from the highway, the defendant's plea should show they were unlawfully on the highway and escaped without fault of the defendant.<sup>60</sup>

F. TRIAL.—It is not a variance to allege destruction of plaintiff's fence by the defendant and prove that it was destroyed by the defendant's cattle.<sup>61</sup>

Province of Judge and Jury.<sup>62</sup>—It is for the court to say what constitutes a lawful fence,<sup>63</sup> and for the jury, where the facts are in dispute, to pass upon the sufficiency of the particular fence in question,<sup>64</sup> and other questions of fact,<sup>65</sup> including the amount of damages sustained.<sup>66</sup>

Instructions.<sup>67</sup>—The charge must be in harmony with the law<sup>68</sup>

G. JUDGMENT OR DECREE.<sup>74</sup>—1. In General.—In a proceeding against the animals the judgment is in rem and binds only the animals.<sup>75</sup> At common law single damages only were allowed,<sup>76</sup> but under some statutes, where the trespass is wilful, wanton, or malicious, exemplary damages may be recovered.<sup>77</sup> Ordinarily, the plaintiff is entitled to nominal damages where there is no proof of damage.<sup>78</sup>

2. Costs.—Where by statute the fees to be charged in an action for trespass by certain animals are separately defined, the statute must be followed in such cases, and it is error to assess costs as in other civil cases.<sup>79</sup>

II. CRIMINAL PROSECUTIONS.—A. IN GENERAL.—Aside from the proceedings available to the owner of lands injured by trespassing animals, the owner of the animals in certain cases is subject to a criminal prosecution,<sup>80</sup> as when he drives them upon the land, or into an inclosure, belonging to another without his consent.<sup>81</sup>

INDICTMENT. — An indictment in such cases is generally sufficient when drawn in substantial compliance with the statute creating the offense.<sup>82</sup> It should show that the accused was not the owner, nor entitled to the possession of the land trespassed upon,<sup>83</sup> but need not aver who owned the land;<sup>84</sup> and it should state, when the degree of punishment is regulated thereby, the number of hours the owner of the animals delayed their removal.<sup>85</sup>

W. 210), but (3) when the tenant turns his stock into the rented inclosure after the landlord has resumed possession thereof the indictment will lie (Gartrell v. State [Tex. Civ. App.], 61 S. W. 487), even when (4) the landlord takes possession because of a breach of the rental contract. Gartrell v. State (Tex. Civ. App.), 61 S. W. 487.

I. NATURE AND SCOPE. — A. IN GENERAL. — Trespass to try title is a statutory remedy<sup>1</sup> to recover the possession of land unlawfully withheld from the owner and to which he has the right of immediate possession,<sup>2</sup> and also to determine the title to land<sup>3</sup> without regard to who has actual possession thereof.<sup>4</sup> It is essentially a legal action,<sup>5</sup> though the right to the land in controversy may rest upon a legal or an equitable title.<sup>6</sup>

[a] Peculiar to the State of Texas. Bird v. Montgomery, 34 Tex. 713.

2. Hays v. Texas & P. Ry. Co., 62 Tex. 397; Grimes v. Hobson, 46 Tex. 416; Dangerfield v. Paschal, 20 Tex. 536; English v. Hutchins, 2 Posey (Tex.) 407.

[a] Condemnation proceedings in favor of a railroad company are not exclusive of a landowner's right to bring an action of trespass to try title when the company has taken possession of his land without resorting to that summary proceeding. Hays v. Texas & P. Ry. Co., 62 Tex. 397. See 22 STANDARD PROC. 114.

3. Thomson v. Locke, 66 Tex. 383, 1 S. W. 112; Johnson v. Bryan, 62 Tex. 623; Word v. Drouthett, 44 Tex. 365; Fisk v. Miller, 20 Tex. 572; Emerson v. Pate (Tex. Civ. App.), 165 S. W. 469.

[a] "An action involving a title to land, whatever its form, is in effect an action of trespass to try title. Grimes v. Hobson, 46 Tex. 416; Johnson v. Foster, 34 S. W. 821." Lester v. Hutson (Tex. Civ. App.), 167 S. W. 321, 326.

[b] "A suit, the object of which is to recover title to land, whether upon legal or equitable grounds, is an action of trespass to try title. Johnson v. Bryan, 62 Tex. 623." Lester v. Hutson (Tex. Civ. App.), 167 S. W. 321, 326.

4. Thomson v. Locke, 66 Tex. 383, 1 S. W. 112.

[a] The plaintiff may be in possession and the defendant be claiming adversely. Rains v. Wheeler, 76 Tex. 390, 13 S. W. 324; Mann v. Wallis, 75 Tex. 611, 12 S. W. 1123; Titus v. Johnson, 50 Tex. 224; Edrington v. Butler (Tex. Civ. App.), 33 S. W. 143.

[b] Defendant Never In Possession. (1) The action may be maintained against one who never has occupied the premises, if he claims title thereto. Day Land & C. Co. v. State, 68 Tex. 526, 4 S. W. 865; Titus v. Johnson, 50 Tex. 224; Moody v. Holcomb, 26 Tex. 714. (2) If defendant is not in possession, he must be asserting a claim to it in order to justify the proceeding. Hays v. Texas & P. Ry. Co., 62 Tex. 397.

5. New York & T. Land Co. v. Hyland, 8 Tex. Civ. App. 601, 28 S. W. 206.

6. Gilmore v. O'Neil, 107 Tex. 18, 173 S. W. 203 (reversing 139 S. W. 1162); Browning's Exx. v. Atkinson, 46 Tex. 605; Lester v. Hutson (Tex. Civ. App.), 167 S. W. 321; New York

B. OTHER REMEDIES COMPARED AND DISTINGUISHED.—In its possessory aspect, trespass to try title serves all the purposes of ejectment,<sup>7</sup> and, in so far as it may be used as a remedy to try title to land, it practically supersedes suits to quiet title.<sup>8</sup> It is distinguishable from a proceeding the sole purpose of which is to remove a cloud,<sup>9</sup> specific performance,<sup>10</sup> partition,<sup>11</sup> and boundary contests,<sup>12</sup> yet any of such remedies may be incidentally involved in an action of trespass to try title.<sup>13</sup>

C. APPLICATIONS OF REMEDY.—The action will lie to determine the title and right to public lands,<sup>14</sup> to a right of way,<sup>15</sup> to recover lands upon rescission of an executory contract of sale,<sup>16</sup> and to recover possession from tenants holding wrongfully,<sup>17</sup> but not to recover school

& T. Land Co. v. Hyland, 8 Tex. Civ. App. 601, 28 S. W. 206.

[a] The plaintiff can recover only on the strength of his own title, and not on the weakness of his opponent's. Webster v. International etc. R. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.), 193 S. W. 179.

7. Thomson v. Locke, 66 Tex. 383, 1 S. W. 112; Hays v. Texas P. Ry. Co., 62 Tex. 397; Thurber & Co. v. Conners, 57 Tex. 96; Spence v. McGowan, 53 Tex. 30; Evans v. Womack, 48 Tex. 230; Peevy v. Hurt, 32 Tex. 146. See the title "Ejectment."

[a] Whenever ejectment will lie at common law, trespass to try title may be used under the statute. Hays v. Texas & P. Ry. Co., 62 Tex. 397.

[b] The Principles Applicable To Ejectment Are Retained.—Tyler v. Davis, 61 Tex. 674; Hough v. Hammond, 36 Tex. 657; Berry v. Jagoe, 45 Tex. Civ. App. 6, 100 S. W. 815.

8. Thomson v. Locke, 66 Tex. 383, 1 S. W. 112. See the title "Quieting Title."

9. See Johnson v. Bryan, 62 Tex. 623.

10. Mason v. Bender (Tex. Civ. App.), 97 S. W. 715; Turner v. Cochran, 30 Tex. Civ. App. 549, 70 S. W. 1024. See generally the title "Specific Performance."

[a] A suit for specific performance of a contract of sale of land is not for the recovery of land within the meaning of the statute under which an action of trespass to try title will lie. Hearst's Heirs v. Kuykendall's Heirs, 16 Tex. 327.

11. Peterson v. Fowler, 73 Tex. 524, 11 S. W. 534; Watson v. Hewitt, 45 Tex. 472. See generally the title "Partition."

[a] Partition becomes trespass to try title when one party asserts superior title in himself to the entire property. De La Vega v. League, 64 Tex. 205; Smith v. Davis, 18 Tex. Civ. App. 563, 47 S. W. 101.

12. Nye v. Hawkins, 65 Tex. 600; Spence v. McGowan, 53 Tex. 30; Morrow v. Fleming, 29 Tex. Civ. App. 547, 69 S. W. 244. See the title "Lands and Land Transfers."

lands held under a lease valid on its face,<sup>18</sup> nor to foreclose a mortgage,<sup>19</sup> nor to enforce a right to redeem.<sup>20</sup>

II. JURISDICTION AND VENUE.—Jurisdiction of an action of trespass to try title is determined by the statute governing a suit of that character.<sup>21</sup> Its venue is in the county where the land, or a part thereof, is situated,<sup>22</sup> irrespective of where the defendant may reside.<sup>23</sup>

III. JOINDER OF ACTIONS.—This subject is treated elsewhere in this work.<sup>24</sup>

IV. PARTIES.—A. PLAINTIFF.—An action of trespass to try title should, in accordance with the general rules,<sup>25</sup> be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest.<sup>26</sup>

21. Peterson v. Fowler, 73 Tex. 524, 11 S. W. 534.

[a] A court of equity (1) has no jurisdiction of trespass to try title. Gregg v. Cole, 5 Tex. 417. (2) But where equities are involved, the courts of Texas, which exercise both law and equity jurisdiction, may grant equitable relief. Hunt v. Turner, 9 Tex. 385, 60 Am. Dec. 167; Altgelt v. Escalera, 51 Tex. Civ. App. 108, 110 S. W. 989.

[b] Amount in Controversy.—The action of trespass to try title may be brought in the district court irrespective of the amount in controversy. Thurber & Co. v. Conners, 57 Tex. 96.

[c] Justice's courts have no jurisdiction in trespass to try title. Vernon Sayles Civ. Stats. (Tex.), 1914, art. 2296.

22. Tevis' Heirs v. Armstrong, 71 Tex. 59, 9 S. W. 134; Thomson v. Locke, 66 Tex. 383, 1 S. W. 112; Lester v. Hutson (Tex. Civ. App.), 167 S. W. 321. See generally the title "Venue."

[a] Waiver.—This rule is a personal privilege which may be waived and the issues submitted to a court in another county in which neither the land nor the defendant's residence is located. De La Vega v. League, 64 Tex. 205; State v. Patterson, 17 Tex. Civ. App. 231, 42 S. W. 369.

25. See the title "Parties."

26. Browning's Exx. v. Atkinson, 46 Tex. 605; Hooper v. Hall, 30 Tex. 154.

[a] A trustee claiming title and right to possession, may maintain the action. Rhodes v. Maret, 102 Tex. 519, 119 S. W. 1139; Aldridge v. Pardee, 24 Tex. Civ. App. 254, 60 S. W. 789, affirming 94 Tex. 709.

[b] An executor or administrator, may be the real party in interest with in the rule. Cassidy v. Kluge, 73 Tex. 154, 12 S. W. 13; Barrett v. Barrett's Admr., 31 Tex. 344; Terry v. Cutler, 4 Tex. Civ. App. 570, 23 S. W. 539.

[c] Trespass (1) to try title by one tenant in common against another (St. Louis, A. & T. Ry. Co. v. Prather, 75 Tex. 53, 12 S. W. 969. See Cartmell v. Gammage [Tex. Civ. App.], 64 S. W. 315), or (2) by tenants in common or joint tenants against a third party. Powers v. Minor, 87 Tex. 83, 26 S. W. 1071; Bounds v. Little, 75 Tex. 316, 12 S. W. 1109; Croft v. Rains, 10 Tex. 520. See 14 STANDARD PROC. 742 and the title "Tenants in Common."

[d] A sale pendente lite does not change the responsibilities of the parties, but if the plaintiff recover the judgment should be for the benefit of his vendee. Smith v. Olsen, 92 Tex. 181, 46 S. W. 631; Dwyer v. Rippetoe, 72 Tex. 520, 10 S. W. 668; Hearne v. Erhard, 33 Tex. 60.

B. DEFENDANT.—The defendant in trespass to try title must be the person in possession of, or claiming title to, the premises,<sup>27</sup> and as a general rule the plaintiff is not required to make any other party a defendant,<sup>28</sup> unless necessary to a proper adjudication of the issues involved.<sup>29</sup>

C. JOINDER OF PARTIES.—As a general rule only those parties whose rights and interest in the property in controversy may be affected by the judgment need be joined as plaintiff.<sup>30</sup>

The plaintiff may join as a defendant with the person in possession, any other person who, as landlord, remainderman, reversioner or otherwise, may claim title to the premises or any part thereof adversely to the plaintiff.<sup>31</sup>

D. INTERVENTION AND INTERPLEADER.<sup>32</sup>—Third persons who have an interest in the object of the action, or an interest adverse to both parties, may intervene to protect their rights,<sup>33</sup> and the real owner or warrantor may be brought in to defend the suit.<sup>34</sup>

V. PLEADING.—A. PETITION.—1. In General.—The petition should set forth with certainty<sup>35</sup> the necessary elements of the cause of action,<sup>36</sup> such as the names of the parties and their residence, if known;<sup>37</sup> the location and description of the premises,<sup>38</sup> the plaintiff's interest in the premises,<sup>39</sup> that he was in possession, or entitled to possession,<sup>40</sup> and that he was unlawfully dispossessed by in the district court, and conformably to the principles of trial by ejectment.<sup>71</sup>

B. DISMISSAL, DISCONTINUANCE AND NONSUIT.—The right of the plaintiff, as in other cases, to take a nonsuit at any time before a decision is announced, is applicable to an action of trespass to try title,<sup>72</sup> but such right cannot be exercised, as a general rule, after the defendant files a counterclaim for affirmative relief.<sup>73</sup>

C. QUESTIONS OF LAW AND FACT.—Questions of fact on conflicting evidence are for the jury's determination,<sup>74</sup> e. g., the location of a disputed boundary,<sup>75</sup> and the determination of title to the property involved.<sup>76</sup>

D. INSTRUCTIONS.—The rules relating to instructions generally are applicable to actions of trespass to try title.<sup>77</sup> The instructions must be based on the law applicable to the case,<sup>78</sup> the issues,<sup>79</sup> and the evidence.<sup>80</sup> They should not be misleading,<sup>81</sup> nor invade the province of the jury.<sup>82</sup>

[a] The premises (1) must be described with sufficient certainty to allow a judgment thereon. Wood v. Wel-der, 42 Tex. 396. (2) But when described in the pleadings, a verdict may be aided by a reference to the plead-to try title must be sufficiently consistent and certain to support a judgment thereon. It must conform to the pleadings and proof,<sup>84</sup> and be responsive to the issues and the instructions.<sup>85</sup>

A directed verdict is proper when the undisputed evidence shows in which party the title or right to recover lies.<sup>86</sup> So a directed verdict for the plaintiff is proper, on the issue of title, when he makes out a prima facie paper title, and the defendant fails to prove title in himself;<sup>87</sup> or when the defendant admits title in the plaintiff without pleading facts in his answer constituting a good defense.<sup>88</sup> On the other hand, when the plaintiff fails to prove the title upon which he relies, the jury should be charged to find for the defendant.<sup>89</sup>

The findings of the court, on an issue of improvements relating to two tracts of land, in the absence of a request, need not be separate;<sup>90</sup> they may be made complete by reference to a map filed therewith,<sup>91</sup> but must be in accordance with and sustained by the evidence.<sup>92</sup>

VII. JUDGMENT. — A. IN GENERAL. — In accordance with the general rules relating to judgments, a judgment cannot ordinarily be given against a party not served with citation, or who has not voluntarily appeared.<sup>93</sup> The judgment must conform to the pleadings and proof,<sup>94</sup> and be warranted by the verdict.<sup>95</sup>

A judgment for the plaintiff should be that he recover of the defendant the title or possession, or both, as the case may be,<sup>96</sup> of the premises, describing them,<sup>97</sup> together with the amount of rents and profits or damages assessed,<sup>98</sup> and where he recovers possession, that he have his writ of possession.<sup>99</sup>

ings. Reed v. Phillips (Tex. Civ. App.), 33 S. W. 986.

Judgment for Defendant. — If the plaintiff is not successful, the judgment should be that he take nothing, which is equivalent to a judgment that the defendant recover the land.<sup>1</sup> If defendant is awarded affirmative relief the judgment should, of course, correspond to relief awarded.

B. Costs. — Costs in trespass to try title, in accordance with the general rule, go to the prevailing party.<sup>2</sup> though for good cause shown the court may adjudge otherwise.<sup>3</sup> When the defendant claims all the land in controversy and the plaintiff recovers a part, the latter is entitled to costs.<sup>4</sup> A disclaimer may relieve a defendant of costs,<sup>5</sup> but not when he retains possession,<sup>6</sup> or when liable for the detention.<sup>7</sup>

[b] Trial and Hearing Distinguished.

"Trial" is a common law term, to denote that step in a case by which the facts are ascertained, and is always final, unless the matter is set aside for cause. "Hearing" is an equity term, and may denote the argument and consideration of a case at more than one stage of its progress; but when it results in an absolute disposition of the case it is called "final." But the term "trial," as used in the act on the removal of causes to the federal courts comprehends that step or proceeding in a cause at law or in equity which results in a final judgment or decree, whether the trial be of an issue or question of law or fact. Miller v. Tobin, 9 Sawy. 401, 18 Fed. 609, 616. See also Mass.—Galpin v. Critchlow, 112 Mass. 339, 343, 17 Am. Rep. 176. Mich.—Crane v. Reeder, 28 Mich. 527, 15 Am. Rep. 223. N. H.—Chandler v. Coe, 56 N. H. 184, 22 Am. Rep. 437. See the title "Hearing."

[a] An inquest is a trial, as the term is used in speaking of proceedings in the cause at circuit, which is but a trial of an issue of fact, where the plaintiff alone introduces testimony. Haines v. Davis, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 118, 1 Code Rep. (N. S.) 407.

[b] The Taking of Proofs Before a Master in Chancery Is Not a Trial. Doughty v. West B. & C. Mfg. Co., 8 Blatchf. 107, 7 Fed. Cas. No. 4,030.

[c] The hearing and determining of a motion to discharge an attachment is not in a strictly legal sense a trial; such action of the court may therefore be reviewed on appeal without a motion for a new trial. First Nat. Bank v. Swan, 3 Wyo. 356, 23 Pac. 743. See 20 STANDARD PROC. 427.

[d] A motion for a new trial is not a trial within the code definition. McDermott v. Halleck, 65 Kan. 403, 69 Pac. 335.

[e] A hearing before a mayor for the removal of a city official is not a trial. Avery v. Studley, 74 Conn. 272, 50 Atl. 752.

[f] Granting allowance in divorce action is not an examination of the issues, not a trial. Stewart v. Stewart, 28 Ind. App. 378, 62 N. E. 1023.

[g] A default judgment is not a trial in an action to recover real estate and damages for its detention. Hall v. Sanders, 25 Kan. 538.

[h] A hearing before an auditor is not a trial within the statute giving a right of removal from a state to a federal court. Stone v. Sargent, 129 Mass. 503.

[i] A decision is necessary before it can be said that a cause has been tried. Hastings v. Hastings, 31 Cal. 95.

[j] The term "trial" is used in a restricted sense in a statute which provides that a sick juror may be discharged, another sworn, and "the trial begin anew," referring to the investigation of facts commencing after a jury is sworn and ending with the charge of the court. State v. Hasledahl, 2 N. D. 521, 52 N. W. 315, 16 L. R. A. 150.

cases under a statute, the term is used in a restricted sense, e. g., with reference to issues of fact, not issues of law.<sup>5</sup>

A "trial according to the course of the common law" is a trial before a jury under right rulings made by the trial judge in the presence of the jury.<sup>6</sup>

II. WHEN TRIAL COMMENCES AND TERMINATES.—The decisions as to the precise point at which a trial is deemed to have begun are influenced by the particular matter or statute under consideration and the supposed intent of the legislature in enacting the statute.<sup>7</sup> Under the common acceptance of the terms "trial" and "hearing," the trial is commenced when all dilatory proceedings have been disposed of, and when all ordinary efforts to prevent a trial have been ineffectually exhausted, and when the cause is called for trial and nothing remains to be done but to proceed therein.<sup>8</sup> Within this rule, the trial is begun just as soon as, but not before, the court enters upon the impaneling of a jury for the trial of the matters of fact presented by the pleadings.<sup>9</sup> It has been held that the trial begins when the jurors are called and placed in the jury box for examination on their voir dire,<sup>10</sup> or when the case is called for trial, unless the trial be then postponed.<sup>11</sup> Under some statutes, particularly those relating to appeal and error, a trial does not commence until an issue of fact is joined,<sup>12</sup> or when the jury is sworn in,<sup>13</sup> but in criminal cases generally the trial begins with the proceedings in open court after the pleadings are finished and the case is otherwise ready,<sup>14</sup> i. e., the instant the court enters upon the impaneling of a jury,<sup>15</sup> though for the purpose of determining when jeopardy attaches or other questions based thereon a trial is said to begin at the moment a full jury is impaneled and sworn,<sup>16</sup> not including a preliminary examination,<sup>17</sup> nor arraignment,<sup>18</sup> nor judgment on a plea of guilty.<sup>19</sup>

A trial terminates with the termination of the investigation of the facts,<sup>20</sup> and with the rendition of the verdict,<sup>21</sup> and the discharge of the jury.<sup>22</sup>

23. Justice's docket, see the title "Justices of the Peace."

Some statutes provide that the clerk must enter causes upon the calendar of the court according to the date of issue.<sup>24</sup>

B. STRIKING CAUSE FROM DOCKET OR CALENDAR. — A cause may be stricken from the docket or calendar, on motion,<sup>25</sup> on notice,<sup>26</sup> when for any reason the cause is not properly on the docket or calendar,<sup>27</sup> or if it is not ready when reached on the trial call,<sup>28</sup> or when counsel, having answered ready at the call of the calendar in the morning without reservation, is absent on another engagement, at the time when the case is reached.<sup>29</sup> But such a motion is not a proper remedy by which to raise objections relating to parties and service of process,<sup>30</sup> or to try the merits of the case,<sup>31</sup> or to raise the question that the note of issue is defective in form.<sup>32</sup>

When Application Made. — It has been held that the party may wait until the cause is reached on the day calendar to make the motion to strike,<sup>33</sup> but some courts hold otherwise.<sup>34</sup>

[a] On the first day of the term, the party should make his motion. Marvin v. Bowlby, 135 Mich. 640, 98 N. W. 399.

[b] A motion made several weeks after a cause is placed on the calendar and on the day the cause is called for trial is not in apt time. McDonald v. People, 123 Ill. App. 346; Freund v. Huylers, 102 Ill. App. 480; Winterburn v. Parlow, 102 Ill. App. 368.

Effect of Order. — An order striking a civil cause from the docket is not equivalent to a dismissal.<sup>35</sup> Its legal effect is to suspend further proceedings until some other steps are taken by which a final disposition can be had.<sup>36</sup> The case is temporarily abated but remains in the court in which it is pending.<sup>37</sup> But the striking of a criminal case from the docket unconditionally is equivalent to a nolle prosequi.<sup>38</sup>

C. REINSTATEMENT OF CAUSE. — The court ordinarily has discretionary power, for good cause shown to reinstate causes dismissed or stricken from the docket.<sup>39</sup>

IV. TIME OF TRIAL AND ADJOURNMENTS. — A. IN CIVIL ACTIONS. — The time of the trial of civil causes is generally regulated by statute,<sup>40</sup> and rules of court,<sup>41</sup> which vary in the different states. And it is sometimes fixed by stipulation of the parties.<sup>42</sup> A typical statute provides for the trial of the action at the first term of court following the service of process or completion of the issues, if the service of process or the joinder of issue was had a specified time before the commencement of the term.<sup>43</sup> In some jurisdictions, a large discretion is reposed in the trial court as to the particular day at which a cause shall be tried.<sup>44</sup> It is reversible error to force a defendant to go to trial at a term prior to that at which the action first became triable.<sup>45</sup> Of course, it is error to call a case for trial before it is at issue,<sup>46</sup> and ground for new trial,<sup>47</sup> to compel a party over his objection to go to trial at a term when it is not triable.

B. IN CRIMINAL PROSECUTIONS. — 1. Generally. — The trial of criminal cases must be had at the time prescribed by law for holding court. If held at an unauthorized time, the conviction is void.<sup>48</sup> Unless statute provides otherwise,<sup>49</sup> the trial may take place at any time after the arrest of the accused,<sup>50</sup> even at the same term of court at which the indictment is found.<sup>51</sup> Some statutes require the state to try the defendant at the term at which the defendant's demand for trial is entered or the next succeeding term.<sup>52</sup>

[a] Statute Construed.—A statute providing that "if the defendant is in custody, or on bail, when the indictment is found, the trial may take place at the same term of the court, on a day to be fixed by the court," does not prohibit the trial at that term of a defendant not in custody or on bail when the indictment is found. At What Day in Term. — Statutes sometimes authorize the trial court to set any day of the term for the trial of criminal cases.<sup>55</sup>

2. Speedy Trial. — a. In General. — Both at common law, by the magna charta,<sup>56</sup> and in modern practice under constitutional provision,<sup>57</sup> a person accused of crime has a right to a speedy trial, whether he is in custody or at large on bail.<sup>58</sup> Pursuant to such provision, statutes have been enacted which provide that if persons accused of crime are not tried within a specified time after indictment found or information filed, the prosecution must be dismissed and the defendant discharged or his bail exonerated,<sup>59</sup> unless good cause to the contrary is shown,<sup>60</sup> as where the delay is caused by the defendant himself,<sup>61</sup> or is occasioned by a want of time to try the case,<sup>62</sup> or by a mistrial.<sup>63</sup> And even if there is no statute upon the subject, the court has a right to intervene where the delay, oppression and wrong are palpable.<sup>64</sup>

[a] The trial court is authorized to set capital cases down for trial on (1) some particular day. It is not required to set them according to their file numbers, that is to set those which have the earliest file number first, but in calling the docket the court must set or dispose of cases as they may be reached. Hardin v. State, 40 Tex. Crim. 208, 214, 49 S. W. 607. (2) It can set a day during the term prior to the day set for taking up the criminal docket. Gaines v. State, 38 Tex. Crim. 202, 42 S. W. 385.

Provisions guaranteeing the right to a speedy trial must receive a reasonable interpretation.<sup>65</sup> The right guaranteed is necessarily relative,<sup>66</sup> and is consistent with delays, and depends upon circumstances.<sup>67</sup> It requires merely that the trial shall take place as soon after indictment as the prosecution can, with reasonable diligence, prepare for it, without needless, vexatious or oppressive delay, having in view, however, the delays which may be incident to the fixed rules which regulate judicial proceedings.<sup>68</sup>

[a] "The speedy trial, to which a person charged with crime is entitled under the constitution, then is, a trial at such a time after the finding of the indictment, regard being had to the terms of court, as shall afford the prosecution a reasonable opportunity, by the fair and honest exercise of reasonable diligence, to prepare for a trial." United States v. Fox, 3 Mont. 512, quoted in Ex parte Miller (Colo.), 180 Pac. 749, 750.

[b] Immediate Trial.—The constitution does not require that the trial take place immediately upon presentation of the indictment or the arrest upon it. Beavers v. Haubert, 198 U. S. 77, 25 Sup. Ct. 573, 49 L. ed. 950; Ex parte Stanley, 4 Nev. 113.

[d] This provision has no other function than to protect those accused of crime against possible delay, caused either by wilful oppression, or the

New and Second Trials.—The constitutional provision applies to all times during which the accused is subject to trial. It applies to new trials on motion, or after remand of a cause after disposition of an appeal, and to a trial after a mistrial.<sup>69</sup> But a statute requiring a discharge of the defendant if not brought to trial within a given time after indictment found or information filed does not apply to such a case.<sup>70</sup>

b. Assertion of Right, and Discharge for Delay.—(I.) Necessity of Invoking Statute and Waiver.—The right to a speedy trial may be waived by the accused,<sup>71</sup> even in a capital case.<sup>72</sup> And as a general rule the defendant must invoke the statute directing his discharge if not brought to trial in a specified time, in some appropriate manner, or he will be deemed to have waived his right.<sup>73</sup>

(II.) Demand of Trial.—In some states, sometimes by express statute,<sup>74</sup> the accused, to be entitled to a discharge on the ground that he

[a] In Georgia, the statute provides in effect that the accused may demand a trial at the term at which the indictment is found or at the next succeeding term thereafter. If not tried then he shall be absolutely discharged. This statute does not require him to make any further motion or demand at the second term, he may sit mute. Gordon v. State, 106 Ga. 121, 32 S. E. 32; Flagg v. State, 11 Ga. App. 37, 74 S. E. 562.

[b] The indictment must be pending when the demand for trial is made. No one can foresee whether future indictments, even for the same offense, may or may not be returned. If the defendant desires a demand for trial, he must enter such demand as to each indictment returned against him whether they be for the same transaction or even for the same offense. Clay v. State, 4 Ga. App. 142, 60 S. E. 1028.

[c] Where Made.—(1) The demand must be made in the court where the case is pending. Hunley v. State, 105 Ga. 636, 31 S. E. 543. (2) After a transfer of the cause to another court, the demand should be made in that court. Hunley v. State, 105 Ga. 636, 31 S. E. 543. (3) But a demand made before a transfer of the cause in the court in which the case is then pending may be insisted upon in the court to which the case is subsequently transferred. Gordon v. State, 106 Ga. 121, 32 S. E. 32.

[d] The demand may be waived by affirmative act of the defendant, but mere silence at the second term and failure to bring the court's attention to the demand does not amount to a waiver. Voluntary absence from the

was not given a speedy trial, must have placed himself on record in the attitude of demanding a trial, or at least of resisting a postponement,<sup>75</sup> especially when the accused has been tried, and there has been either a mistrial, or a reversal and remand for new trial.<sup>76</sup> In other states no demand of trial need be made,<sup>77</sup> or at least a demand for trial will be presumed if necessary to support an order of discharge.<sup>78</sup>

(III.) Application for and Order of Discharge. — In some states, an accused desiring to avail himself of the statute, must, before trial,<sup>79</sup> apply to the trial court<sup>80</sup> by motion for an order dismissing the prosecution and discharging him,<sup>81</sup> or, it has been held, he may apply to the trial court for a discharge on habeas corpus.<sup>82</sup> In some states, the accused, court operates as a waiver but an involuntary absence does not. Flagg v. State, 11 Ga. App. 37, 74 S. E. 562.

[e] New Demand.—A demand for trial is exhausted and functus officio where the defendant is tried at the second term and convicted. Even if the case thereafter be reinstated upon the docket, if it be by the grant of the defendant's motion for new trial, another demand is necessary before he can claim the benefits arising from the right to demand a trial. Clay v. State, 4 Ga. App. 142, 60 S. E., 1028.

[a] Statute Construed.—A statute, requiring the dismissal of the prosecution if the defendant is not brought to trial within a given time after indictment found or information filed, imposes no initiative action on the defendant. The trial must be offered by the state within the statutory period or good cause for delay shown. But after a trial the statute is satisfied, the time for retrial is within the discretion of the court, and it is therefore incumbent upon the accused to at least manifest a desire for another trial before he is entitled to a dismissal on the ground of delay. *State v. [a] Contra.—In the Matter of Spradlend, 38 Mo. 547, 548, in which the supreme court in denying a petition having made a demand for trial, need not make any further demand or motion at the next succeeding term. If not brought to trial then, an acquittal results automatically by operation of law after the adjournment of the second term. No order of discharge is necessary.<sup>83</sup>

Showing Required. — In some states the accused seeking to be discharged for delay need only show that the time fixed by statute after information filed has expired,<sup>84</sup> and that the case has not been postponed on his application.<sup>85</sup> In others he must also show he is in custody,<sup>86</sup> or that he was ready for and demanded a trial, and objected to a postponement of the case.<sup>87</sup>

Hearing. — The trial court has no discretionary power to deny the motion for discharge on this ground. It must order the prosecution dismissed, unless good cause is shown to the contrary by the prosecution.<sup>88</sup>

(IV.) Review. — If the application for discharge is denied, the accused may have the action of the court reviewed on writ of error or appeal from the judgment in the case,<sup>89</sup> or he may, according to some authorities, apply to the appellate court for a discharge on habeas corpus,<sup>90</sup> or he may procure a writ of mandamus, if, for any reason, for habeas corpus holds the application should be made to the trial court, and "moreover, no person can be discharged under the habeas corpus act who is imprisoned on an indictment, or by virtue of process or commitment to enforce such indictment."

E. 82. (2) The fact that a mistrial is declared at the next term after the defendant had made his demand for trial is not a reason for refusing his discharge. The trial court could try the defendant before another jury at the same term of court. Mager v. State, 21 Ga. App. 139, 94 S. E. 82.

[b] Although the accused is absent from court at the second term because he is imprisoned on another charge, neither he nor his attorney are under duty to call the court's attention to his imprisonment. It was the duty of the court to send for him and put him on trial. Failure to do so operates to discharge him absolutely. Flagg v. State, 11 Ga. App. 37, 74 S. E. 562.

[a] But simply because it would be advantageous to a party to have his cause promptly disposed of does not authorize the court, in its discretion, to give preference to a cause. Haskin v. Murray, 29 App. Div. 370, 51 N. Y. Supp. 542.

Application and Order. — Courts will not grant a cause precedence except upon a proper application<sup>7</sup> made at the proper time.<sup>8</sup> By virtue of statute,<sup>9</sup> when the right to a preference depends upon facts which do not appear in the pleadings or other papers upon which the cause is to be tried or heard,<sup>10</sup> the party desiring a preference must procure an order therefor<sup>11</sup> by timely application usually made before notice of trial,<sup>12</sup> usually upon notice to the adverse party,<sup>13</sup> and upon a showing of special facts and circumstances entitling the cause to a preference.<sup>14</sup> A copy of the order must be served with or before the notice of trial or argument.<sup>15</sup> When no order of court is required, a claim for preference may usually be inserted in the note of issue to be filed with the clerk.<sup>16</sup> In such case the service of a notice of trial before making the application for a preference does not deprive the party of his right to a preference.<sup>17</sup>

D. ADJOURNMENT OR RECESS. — 1. In Civil Actions. — Pending trial of a civil action, the court may in its discretion, take recesses, adjourn the cause or postpone the trial from time to time<sup>18</sup> as the case

[d] But when the defendant is represented by counsel, the absence or illness of one of his attorneys does not

plaint on which the prosecution is based.<sup>28</sup> The trial judge may suspend proceedings temporarily for the purpose of expediting the orderly disposition of other business of the court.<sup>29</sup> He may suspend trial to investigate a charge of bribery of a witness.<sup>30</sup> But he cannot be required to stop a trial already commenced and enter into an inquiry as to the prejudice of a juror.<sup>31</sup> Statutes sometimes provide that while the jury is absent, the court may adjourn from time to time as to other business, but it shall nevertheless open for every purpose connected with the cause submitted to the jury, until a verdict is rendered or the jury discharged.<sup>32</sup>

V. PLACE OF TRIAL.—The trial of civil actions and criminal prosecutions should be held at the proper place for holding court,<sup>33</sup> and the proper county for trial,<sup>34</sup> in accordance with rules elsewhere discussed. Where the statute does not name the place of trial it may be held at the residence of a party or witness who is ill, or at any convenient place, within the jurisdiction.<sup>35</sup> But if the place of trial is designated by law, court must be held there;<sup>36</sup> it cannot be held at any other place, over the objection of a party to the action, for any reason not within the statute.<sup>37</sup> Where required to be held at the county court house it cannot be held at the home of a witness who is ill.<sup>38</sup> If, however, the statute merely requires the trial to be had at the county seat, court may be held in any building in such city or town,<sup>39</sup> e. g., the residence of a judge,<sup>40</sup> or a party,<sup>41</sup> or a witness,<sup>42</sup>

C. FURNISHING ACCUSED WITH LIST OF GRAND JURORS. — At common law it is not necessary to serve the defendant before trial with a list of the names of the grand jurors who returned the indictment.<sup>53</sup>

D. FURNISHING ACCUSED WITH LIST OR NOTICE OF WITNESSES OR EVIDENCE. — 1. List or Notice of Witnesses. — a. In the Absence of Statute. — In the absence of statute requiring it a defendant accused of crime is not entitled to a list of the witness examined before the grand jury, or of the witnesses to be produced against him on the trial.<sup>54</sup> And it has been held, the court cannot in advance of the trial require the prosecution to furnish the defendant such a list,<sup>55</sup> although after the cause has been set down for trial, the court, on an application for a continuance on the ground of want of opportunity to sufficiently prepare for trial because of ignorance as to the witnesses for the prosecution, can exercise its discretion and continue the case, or require a list of the witnesses to be given.<sup>56</sup>

b. Under Statute. — Statutes sometimes require a delivery to persons accused of crime or of certain specified crimes,<sup>57</sup> a specified time before trial,<sup>58</sup> a list containing the names<sup>59</sup> and places of abode<sup>60</sup> of

Under Statute. — In some states, statutes require the party desiring to bring a cause to trial or hearing to give a notice of trial,<sup>6</sup> which notice cannot be dispensed with by the court,<sup>7</sup> except as a condition of granting a favor.<sup>8</sup> If both parties are represented when the case is called for trial, the notice becomes immaterial,<sup>9</sup> except as entitling the party to a continuance on the ground of insufficient notice or knowledge to enable him to prepare for trial.<sup>10</sup>

Waiver. — Even when notice of trial is required by statute, the party may waive his right to notice.<sup>11</sup>

(II.) Form and Sufficiency of. — In the absence of statute or rule of court prescribing the form,<sup>12</sup> any form of notice is sufficient which apprises the adverse party that the cause will be brought on for trial at the time and place specified.<sup>13</sup>

[a] Such a statute has reference only to proceedings taken against a party in his absence. It necessitates proof of such notice as would require the party to appear and prosecute or defend, when one party, in the absence of the other, calls a case for trial

[b] If two actions between the same parties are pending, the notice must specify which action is to be tried. Lisher v. Parmelee, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 22.

(III.) When Given. — Notice of trial cannot be given before issue joined.<sup>14</sup> But it may be given after issue joined and within the time allowed for amendment of the pleadings,<sup>15</sup> although a notice then given is liable to be defeated and rendered unavailing by the service of the amended pleading.<sup>16</sup> The notice must be given the prescribed time before trial.<sup>17</sup> And the court has no authority to shorten the statutory notice,<sup>18</sup> except when the party is seeking or receiving a favor.<sup>19</sup>

(IV.) Service of. — Notice of trial may be served personally,<sup>20</sup> or by mail,<sup>21</sup> in accordance with general rules elsewhere discussed. If there are several defendants, all must be given notice of trial before the plaintiff can move on the trial.<sup>22</sup>

(V.) Effect of Failure To Give Notice. — When upon direct appeal from a judgment of dismissal, it affirmatively appears that there was no proof of the giving of or waiver of notice of trial, the error is deemed prejudicial and the judgment will be reversed.<sup>23</sup> But a failure to give notice may be waived.<sup>24</sup>

(VI.) Effect of Irregularities in Notice and Remedies. — When the notice of trial is deemed irregular for any reason, it should be returned promptly to the attorney causing it to be served,<sup>25</sup> or the irregularity will be waived.<sup>26</sup> But a void notice need not be returned.<sup>27</sup> The party serving the notice cannot have its sufficiency determined by a motion to compel its acceptance.<sup>28</sup> Irregularities or mistakes in the notice of trial which occasion no surprise are immaterial and will be disregarded.<sup>29</sup>

d. Note of Issue.—Some statutes require the party serving the notice of trial to file with the clerk a note of issue<sup>30</sup> within the time prescribed,<sup>31</sup> stating the nature of the issue, whether of law or of fact,<sup>32</sup> and the time when the last pleading was served.<sup>33</sup> The statute requiring the filing of a note of issue is directory, not mandatory,<sup>34</sup> as the note is for the convenience and information of the clerk,<sup>35</sup> rather than a jurisdictional prerequisite to trial or summary disposition of the action.<sup>36</sup> The court may in a proper case allow a note of issue to be filed or amended nunc pro tunc.<sup>37</sup>

e. New Notices of Trial and Notes of Issue.—The note of issue should be filed as often as the issue is changed,<sup>38</sup> unless statute provides otherwise.<sup>39</sup> And this requirement cannot be evaded by the stipulation of the attorneys.<sup>40</sup>

After Amendment to Pleadings.—Except when statute provides otherwise,<sup>41</sup> an amendment to the pleadings changing the issues, made after serving a notice of trial and filing note of issue, necessitates new notices,<sup>42</sup> unless the court allowing the amendment otherwise directs,<sup>43</sup> or unless new notices are waived,<sup>44</sup> or unless the amendment was not interposed in good faith.<sup>45</sup> But when a proper notice of trial is filed, the court may permit the note of issue to be amended nunc pro tunc.<sup>46</sup>

After the filing of supplemental pleadings a new note of issue is not required.<sup>47</sup>

47. See infra, this note.

[a] Reason.—Since a supplemental pleading does not, as does an amendment, become a substitute for the original pleadings, and the issues joined

New Trial. — Since upon the granting of a new trial, whether by the trial<sup>48</sup> or by an appellate court,<sup>49</sup> the new trial proceeds as if no trial had taken place and new issues may be made, within certain limitations, a new notice of trial and note of issue may be required.<sup>50</sup>

2. In Criminal Prosecutions. — The practice in setting criminal prosecutions for trial differs in the several states.<sup>51</sup> In the absence of statute requiring it, written notice of trial to the defendant is not required.<sup>52</sup>

G. CALLING CASE FOR TRIAL. — Calling a case for trial is an announcement or declaration by the court that the cause has been reached in its order and that the judicial examination of the issues of law or fact upon which the cause depends is about to begin.<sup>53</sup> As a general rule, cases should be called and tried in the order in which they are docketed.<sup>54</sup> But the court cannot decline to prefer a cause entitled to preference by statute or the general rules of practice.<sup>55</sup> On the calling of the case, the parties announce their readiness for trial.<sup>56</sup> The court may, it seems, permit a party to withdraw his an-under the original pleadings ordinarily remain as issues to be tried. Lovatt v. Watson, 35 Hun (N. Y.) 553; Myers v. Metropolitan Elevated R. Co., 19 Civ. Proc. 448, 12 N. Y. Supp. 2, 16 Daly 410, 34 N. Y. St. 293; Fisher v. Gunn, 12 Misc. 207, 34 N. Y. Supp. 27, 67 N. Y. St. 828.

[a] But where the statute provides that a case once placed on the trial calendar remains there until disposed of, it is not deemed disposed of if a new trial results from an appeal, and it need not be re-noticed for trial and no new note of issue is necessary. Watson v. Phyfe, 18 Abb. N. C. 469, 11 Civ. Proc. 442, 4 N. Y. St. 750, 5 N. Y. St. 328.

nouncement of readiness to enable him to except to the pleadings of the adverse party.<sup>57</sup>

H. PASSING CAUSE.—When on the calling of a cause, it appears that the counsel of one of the parties is engaged in the trial of another cause,<sup>58</sup> or that something has occurred since the case was put on the calendar which renders it unjust to compel either party to go to trial,<sup>59</sup> the court may pass it temporarily and set it for trial at the foot of the call for the next day or the day to which it is passed. This rule is sometimes incorporated in rules of court.<sup>60</sup> The attention of the court should be called to the engagement in a proper way when the day calendar is called at the opening of the court.<sup>61</sup> And a party by moving to have a cause passed till another day impliedly consents to a trial on the day to which it is passed.<sup>62</sup>

VII. CONDUCT OF AND PROCEEDINGS ON TRIAL.—A. GENERALLY.—The supervision and conduct of trials, both civil and criminal, are largely within the sound discretion of the court or judge,<sup>63</sup>

S. W. 274), although (2) it is not error for the court to require the defendant to say first whether he is ready for trial. Pines v. State, 21 Ga. 227; King v. State, 21 Ga. 220. (3) However, when the state has asked for a continuance, that should be first disposed of. State v. Emerson, 90 Mo. 236, 2 S. W. 274.

[b] But a solicitor general is not required to announce "ready," when a case is called in its regular order. It is otherwise if the case is called out of its order. Duffey v. Harris, 19 Ga. App. 646, 91 S. E. 1006; Collins v. Smith, 7 Ga. App. 653, 67 S. E. 847.

[c] The prohibition of amendment after an announcement of readiness for trial has reference to issues of fact and not of law. So that when the defendant, after an announcement of ready for trial, presents a demurrer which is heard and overruled, and then requests leave to amend his answer, an order denying leave on the sole ground that he has announced his readiness for trial is erroneous. De Witt v. Jones, 17 Tex. 620.

[a] A rule relating to a "day calendar" is not confined to the general calendar but includes also the preferred calendar. Mayer v. McWalters, 17 App. Div. 291, 45 N. Y. Supp. 243.

[b] The United States district court is a court of record within a rule of court providing for the passing of a cause when counsel is engaged in the trial of a cause in a court of record. Spero v. Supreme Council, 95 App. Div. 499, 84 N. Y. Supp. 939.

except as to matters regulated by statute,<sup>64</sup> and as to such matters, the trial court cannot be too careful in planting itself firmly upon the statute and complying strictly with its terms,<sup>65</sup> but technical errors are not ground for reversal and new trial.<sup>66</sup>

B. RIGHT TO A FAIR TRIAL. — Parties litigant are entitled to a fair and impartial trial, as far as that may be secured to them by law.<sup>87</sup> Both the federal and state constitutions guarantee the right to a fair and impartial trial to a person accused of crime.<sup>88</sup> This right is invaded, where the minds of the jury are affected by any influence, except the law and the evidence,<sup>89</sup> such as hisses, cheers, demonstrations, improper appeals, and argument not warranted by the evidence.<sup>90</sup> fair and impartial trial. C. PUBLICITY OF PROCEEDINGS. — 1. In Civil Actions. — As a general rule the sittings of every court of justice should be public, both at common law,<sup>95</sup> and under statutes.<sup>96</sup> At common law, three exceptions are commonly made, though the first two have been said to be no exceptions at all.<sup>97</sup> The first exception exists in the case of wardships,<sup>98</sup> the second in the case of lunatics,<sup>99</sup> and third, where a public trial would defeat the object of the action.<sup>1</sup> Perhaps an exception exists in those cases where the practice of the old ecclesiastical courts is continued.<sup>2</sup> In proceedings for the annulment or dissolution of marriages, 97. Scott v. Scott, (1913) App. Cas. (Eng.) 417, Ann. Cas. 1913E, 614, per Earl of Halsbury, p. 442.

[a] With respect to the first two apparent exceptions, neither forms a part of the public administration of justice at all, per Earl of Halsbury, p. 442. The court is really sitting primarily to guard the interests of the ward or lunatic. Its jurisdiction is parental and administrative, and the disposal of controverted questions is an incident only in the jurisdiction, per Viscount Haldane, p. 437. Scott v. Scott, (1913) App. Cas. (Eng.) 417, Ann. Cas. 1913E, 614.

[a] With respect to this exception, that of litigation as to a secret process, this case stands on a different footing from the first two exceptions. The paramount object of litigation is to do justice, and as publicity would destroy the subject-matter, the general rule as to publicity, "after all only the means to an end," must accordingly yield. Scott v. Scott, (1913) A. C. (Eng.) 417, 437, Ann. Cas. 1913E, 614, per Viscount Haldane.

2. D. v. D. (1903) L. R. P. D. (Eng.) 144; Nagle-Gilman v. Christopher, 4 Ch. Div. (Eng.) 173, 46 L. J. Ch. 60, obiter. But compare Scott v. Scott, (1913) App. Cas. (Eng.) 417, 470, 473, Ann. Cas. 1913E, 614, 631, where Lord Shaw states that the ecclesiastical courts from the moment they sat to open the depositions of the witnesses and throughout the whole course of the trial thereafter were open courts of a private trial cannot be ordered,<sup>3</sup> unless authorized by statute,<sup>4</sup> though even under a statute requiring such actions to be heard in open court, it has been held that while the court cannot exclude the general public,<sup>5</sup> it may exclude persons of such immature years, as in the judgment of the court, should not be permitted to listen to the testimony.<sup>6</sup>

There is a conflict of authority as to the power of the parties to stipulate to a hearing at chambers.<sup>7</sup>

Some statutes authorize trials of issues of fact in private in actions for divorce, criminal conversation, seduction, or breach of promise of marriage.<sup>8</sup> But such statutes do not authorize the court to forbid the making of a public report of the testimony in a case.<sup>9</sup>

2. In Criminal Prosecutions.—A person accused of crime has a constitutional right to a public trial.<sup>10</sup> There is some diversity among

7. See 16 STANDARD PROC. 611, 613, and Nagle-Gilman v. Christopher, 4 Ch. Div. (Eng.) 173, 46 L. J. Coop. 106, 35 Eng. Reprint 495, holding private hearings in cases of family disputes may be had in equity on the consent of both parties.

[a] As Dependent on Nature of Proceedings.—In proceedings, which, like those in the matrimonial court, affect status, the public has a general interest which the parties cannot exclude. Consequently they cannot consent to a private hearing. It would be otherwise where all that is at stake is the individual rights of the parties. Scott v. Scott, (1913) App. Cas. the decisions as to when the defendant is deprived of a public trial and as to when he is deemed to be prejudiced by an exclusion of spectators.<sup>11</sup>

A public trial, as the expression necessarily implies, is one at which the public is free to attend;<sup>12</sup> one that is not secret.<sup>13</sup> Publicity does not absolutely forbid all temporary shutting of doors, or render incompetent a witness who cannot be heard by the largest audience.<sup>14</sup> On the other hand, the fact that the officers of the court are allowed to be present does not make a trial public.<sup>15</sup>

[a] Presence of Others.—But it has been held that the trial is public, in a sense, when the officers of the court, the witnesses and counsel are present and when members of the bar are not excluded. Reagan v. United States, 202 Fed. 488, 120 C. C. A. 627,

Generally the effect of the constitutional provision has arisen in four classes of cases: (1) the exclusion of persons where there is insufficient room in the court room; (2) the exclusion of spectators temporarily to secure proper administration of justice, when the trial is interrupted by an obtrusive mob which tends to embarrass witnesses or detract from the decorum of the court; (3) the exclusion of spectators in the interests of public morals and public decency; and (4) the exclusion of witnesses.<sup>16</sup>

With respect to the first class, the authorities agree that the court may regulate the admission of the public to the court room in any appropriate manner to prevent overcrowding and disorder.<sup>17</sup> The word "public" is not used in an enlarged sense,<sup>18</sup> and does not require unreasonable and impossible things, as that all persons have an absolute right to be present regardless of the conveniences of the court and due and orderly conduct of the trial.<sup>19</sup>

With respect to the second class, a court may exclude objectionable characters,<sup>20</sup> and those persons who fail to behave decorously, or who interfere in any manner with the conduct of a case;<sup>21</sup> and it may temporarily exclude all the spectators from the court room if they become disorderly or boisterous so as to interfere with the court and confuse

[a] Criticising this Idaho case, the court in State v. Keeler, 52 Mont. 205, 156 Pac. 1080, Ann. Cas. 1917E, 619, L. R. A. 1916E, 472, says: "If the trial court employs the term 'spectators' in its common, ordinary acceptance, then any friend of the defendant present merely as a looker-on, an observer, or a witness to the proceedings was excluded in violation of the rule which the court announces. Who shall determine whether a spectator is drawn to the courtroom by idle curiosity or by interest? What test shall be applied and what shall constitute interest sufficient to justify his presence? Why should an exception be made in favor of a friend of the defendant while the taxpayer, who is interested to know how the public remain, and members of the bar;<sup>28</sup> but other authorities hold that such a sweeping exclusion is opposed to the constitution.<sup>29</sup>

With respect to the fourth class, the exclusion of witness from the court room does not deprive a defendant of his right to a public trial.<sup>30</sup>

When the trial does not relate to indecent or vulgar matters, an order excluding the public generally without regard to their conduct or character is erroneous.<sup>31</sup>

Waiver. — A person accused of crime may waive his right to a public trial.<sup>32</sup> He may do so by requesting an order excluding spectators.<sup>33</sup> It has been held that this right cannot be waived by silence<sup>34</sup> any more than the right to a trial by jury where the charge is felony and servants—the judge, the county attorney, the sheriff, etc.—perform their work, is excluded? The bare statement of the proposition is its own refutation.

[b] The right of judges to hold court for each other and perform each other's duties where they find it necessary or convenient, does not involve the right or power of one judge to finish for another the performance of a duty already entered upon by the latter, when that duty involves the exercise of judgment and the application of legal knowledge and judicial deliberation to facts known to the latter and not known to the former. *Durden v. statute allows a substitution of another judge.<sup>60</sup> And it has been held that neither the government nor the accused nor both can consent to the substitution of one judge for another in a felony case.<sup>61</sup> If the judge becomes incapacitated by illness or death after the jury is impaneled and sworn, the proper course to pursue is to declare a mistrial and begin de novo.<sup>62</sup> It is error either to substitute another judge during trial,<sup>63</sup> or to appoint a member of the bar to preside over the trial during the judge's absence,<sup>64</sup> or to fill the place of one of the judges who leaves the court pending trial.<sup>65</sup>

Civil Cases. — Similar rules seem to govern the substitution of the judge during the trial of civil actions.<sup>66</sup> But it has been held permissible to substitute another judge after the hearing of the evidence and instructions and before argument,<sup>67</sup> and to substitute another judge with the consent of the parties,<sup>68</sup> and also that there is no ground for reversal unless some special harm or prejudice results from the change.<sup>69</sup>

[a] Reason of Rule.—The argument that the defendant may waive his presence necessarily proceeds upon the ground that he alone is concerned as to the mode by which he may be deprived of his life or liberty, and that the chief object of the prosecution is to punish him for the crime charged. But this is a mistaken view of the relations which the accused holds to the public as of the end of human punishment. The public has an interest in his life and liberty. Neither can be taken except in the mode prescribed by law; that which the law makes essential in proceedings involving life and liberty cannot be dispensed with or affected by the consent of the accused. Hopt v. Utah, 110 U. S. 574, 578, 4 Sup. Ct. 202, 28 L. ed. 262.

[b] Failure to object or except does not affect the matter. State v. Thomas, 128 La. 813, 55 So. 415, citing and quoting Hopt v. Utah, 110 U. S. 574, 4 Sup. Ct. 202, 28 L. ed. 262.

[c] Neither presence of counsel nor his failure to object is a waiver. Maurer v. People, 43 N. Y. 1.

unless a waiver is authorized by statute.<sup>11</sup> According to other authorities, the defendant can waive any right guaranteed him by the law or the constitution, and can therefore waive his right to be present at any stage of the trial in noncapital cases.<sup>12</sup> And it has been held he may, even in capital cases, waive his right to be present at a step in the progress of the case,<sup>13</sup> though the general rule is otherwise.<sup>14</sup>

In all cases where the defendant's presence is not essential he may waive the right to be present,<sup>15</sup> as in misdemeanor cases in which he is represented by counsel,<sup>16</sup> or the hearing and determination of a motion

[a] Distinction Between Fine and Imprisonment Cases.—In State v. Campbell, 42 W. Va. 246, 24 S. E. 875, the court after reviewing authorities as to whether, in cases where imprisonment may be inflicted as punishment, the accused must be present, concludes that in all misdemeanor cases the ac-

for a change of venue<sup>17</sup> or continuance,<sup>18</sup> or when the jury is taken to view the place of the crime.<sup>19</sup>

A waiver of the right to be present at certain periods of his trial is sometimes permitted the accused by statute,<sup>20</sup> as when he voluntarily absents himself at the rendition of the verdict.<sup>21</sup>

By Whom Waived. — Even when a waiver is permitted, it is a general rule that in felony cases, the presence of an accused can only be waived personally.<sup>22</sup> His counsel has no right to waive this right for him,<sup>23</sup> unless both the accused and his counsel are in court, and the waiver of counsel is made in the defendant's presence,<sup>24</sup> or unless, it has been held, counsel is duly authorized,<sup>25</sup> or the waiver is acquiesced in.<sup>26</sup> In misdemeanor cases, it has been held that the right to be present can be waived by the defendant through his counsel with the consent of the court,<sup>27</sup> but there is authority to the contrary.<sup>28</sup> cused may appear by attorney and the trial may proceed without his personal presence, but that judgment of imprisonment cannot be imposed without bringing the defendant into court. Compare Ex parte Tracy, 25 Vt. 93. See generally the title "Sentence and Judgment."

I. RIGHT TO AND PRESENCE OF COUNSEL.—1. In Civil Actions. A party to a civil action may appear by counsel.<sup>39</sup> But it is not the legal duty of a court in a civil case to see that litigants are supplied with counsel in every stage of the proceedings.<sup>40</sup> It is the duty of counsel engaged in the trial to remain in the court during its session or be represented there,<sup>41</sup> but their absence or withdrawal from the court room does not deprive the court of jurisdiction to proceed.<sup>42</sup> Absence of counsel does not give the party an absolute right to a continuance.<sup>43</sup> And it is not in itself a ground for new trial,<sup>44</sup> or for equitable relief against the judgment.<sup>45</sup>

2. In Criminal Prosecutions.—a. Counsel for Prosecution. (I.) Generally.—In the United States, the state's attorney is required to appear for the state in all public prosecutions<sup>46</sup> in which he is not,

But see 13 STANDARD PROC. 978.

[a] While a trial court should refrain from instructing the jury in the absence of counsel, the court is not required to suspend proceedings if counsel see fit to absent themselves from the courtroom when their presence may be required at any moment. Aerheart v. St. Louis, etc. R. Co., 99 Fed. 907, 40 C. C. A. 171. But see 13 STANDARD PROC. 979.

[b] If counsel for a party is absent when the cause is reached on the calendar the case may be tried in his absence. But if, from continuance of cases or other cause, the case is reached sooner than expected the court should grant a reasonable time for him to appear. Kyle v. Chase, 14 Neb. 528, 16 N. W. 821. See Wasson v. Palmer, 13 Neb. 376, 14 N. W. 171. Passing cause pending engagement of counsel, see supra, VI, H. Striking cause from calendar in such a case, see supra, II, B.

[c] The court may send for counsel as a matter of courtesy on its part, but this is not a legal obligation or duty, and hence a failure to do so is not reversible error. Ill.—Heenan v. Howard, 81 Ill. App. 629. Okla.—North v. Hooker, 172 Pac. 77; Lindsey v. Goodman, 57 Okla. 408, 157 Pac. 344. R. I. Alexander Bros. v. Gardiner, 14 R. I. 15. Wis.—Walczakowski v. Milwaukee E. R. & L. [d] But where courts render decisions in the absence of counsel, they should be particularly careful to direct that notice be promptly given to the attorneys of the parties. Linville v. Sheeline, 30 Nev. 106. It will be presumed that the clerk gave the required notice. Linville v. Scheeline, 30 Nev. 106, 93 Pac. 225.

[a] If the prosecuting attorney, without stating any reason, refuses to participate in a prosecution, the court

(II.) Additional Counsel To Assist Regular Attorney. — The state's attorney is permitted by law to have the assistance of private counsel in the trial of criminal cases.<sup>50</sup> He may in his discretion, subject to the supervision of the trial court, associate with himself counsel to aid him on the trial.<sup>51</sup> And the court may in its discretion, by order, appoint

[a] Under a statute providing that when, in the opinion of the court, the ends of justice would be promoted

Discretion of the Court. — The selection and appointment of counsel to assist the prosecuting attorney lies in the discretion of the presiding judge.<sup>60</sup> It is the duty of the court to prevent oppression of the accused and to permit such assistance, only, as justice and fairness may require.<sup>61</sup>

Time of Appointment. — It is not required that the appointment of an assistant prosecutor be made before the cause is set for trial.<sup>62</sup>

Swearing of Assistant Counsel. — An assistant private counsel for the prosecution need not be sworn as assistant prosecuting attorney to enable him to act.<sup>63</sup> thereby, the court may appoint some suitable person, an attorney at law, to perform for the time being the duties required by law to be performed by the state's attorney, the court may appoint an attorney to assist the state's attorney. State v. Johnson, 24 S. D. 590, 124 N. W. 847.

[b] Affirmative Action by Court and District Attorney Necessary. — Under a statute providing that the county attorney may, under the direction of the court, procure such assistance in the trial of a person charged with a felony as he may deem necessary, some affirmative action on the part of the county attorney and the court is essential. Mere acquiescence in or assent to the appearance of a private counsel is insufficient. An order that a designated person "is permitted" to assist is not a compliance with the statute, when no affirmative action on the part of the county attorney is taken. McKay v. State, 90 Neb. 63, 70, 132 N. W. 741, 39 L. R. A. (N. S.) 714; Bradshaw v. State, 17 Neb. 147, 22 N. W. 361. See also Goldsberry v. State, 92 Neb. 211, 137 N. W. 1116.

[b] Who should be appointed is a matter resting in the discretion of the presiding judge. State v. Bennett, 117 Me. 113, 102 Atl. 974; State v. Bartlett, 55 Me. 200.

[c] The number of assistants is within the discretion of the trial court. Thalheim v. State, 38 Fla. 169, 189, 20 So. 938.

[d] An attorney cannot appear as of right as assistant to the prosecuting attorney whether his services are gratuitous or paid for by private parties. Hayner v. People, 213 Ill. 142, 72 N. E. 792.

61. People v. Gray, 251 Ill. 431, 437, 96 N. E. 268.

[a] The court should see (1) that the criminal law is not being used to gratify malice or personal ends (Hayner v. People, 213 Ill. 142, 72 N. E. 792), and (2) that counsel for the defendant are not overwhelmed, on account of their inexperience, by the number and ability of counsel representing the state. People v. Blevins, 251 Ill. 381, 96 N. E. 214, Ann. Cas. 1912C, 451.

62. Johns v. State, 88 Neb. 145, 129 N. W. 247.

[a] The appointment, after the passing by the state of twelve jurors for cause, of an assistant prosecutor is not error, where the accused had an opportunity to examine all the jurors touching their connection and affiliation with the assistant counsel. Johns v. State, 88 Neb. 145, 129 N. W. 247. See Galloway v. State, 88 Neb. 447, 129 N. W. 987.

Control of Prosecution.—The state's attorney as a public officer must have the direction and assume the responsibility of the prosecution, although he has the assistance of private counsel.<sup>64</sup> But it is not error for the assistant counsel to read the indictment to the jury,<sup>65</sup> or to conduct the examination of the witnesses for the state.<sup>66</sup>

An objection to the appearance of private counsel to assist the county attorney must be made at a proper time and in a proper manner.<sup>67</sup>

(III.) Appointment of Special Counsel Instead of Regular Attorney. A trial court has inherent power, aside from the statute, to appoint a temporary representative of the state, if for any reason the regular prosecuting attorney is absent or unable to act.<sup>68</sup> And statutes sometimes provide for such appointment.<sup>69</sup> Whether such a statute is exclusive and prevents a county board of supervisors from supplying the place of the regular attorney is a question on which the courts disagree.<sup>70</sup> A private attorney, by such an appointment, becomes vested

[a] Illustrative of the manner of violating this right, (1) it has been held that the right is infringed by allowing bystanders within the space between counsel for the accused and the jury and witnesses (State v. Weldon, 91 S. C. 29, 74 S. E. 43, Ann. Cas. 1913E, 801, 39 L. R. A. [N. S.] 687), or (2) by denying defendant's counsel the right to state what he expects to show by a witness (Spurlock v. State [Ala. App.], 82 So. 557), or (3) by instructing the jury, without any saving words, that they are not to consider the evidence in the light of arguments of counsel (Com. v. Polichinus, 229 Pa. 311, 78 Atl. 382), or (4) that they are to disregard the argument of counsel (See 2 STANDARD PROC. 828). (5) But it is not infringed by an instruction not to consider remarks of counsel as evidence or for any purpose unless such argument or remark is justified by the evidence. Spicer v. State, 52 Tex. Crim. 177, 105 S. W. 813.

76. See infra, this section.

The right to be heard by counsel should be construed so as to give every one accused of crime the benefit of counsel at every step and stage of the proceeding.<sup>77</sup>

(II.) Right of Accused To Appear Without Counsel.—A person accused of crime is not compelled to have counsel.<sup>78</sup> He may waive his constitutional right to counsel,<sup>79</sup> and appear without counsel if he so desires,<sup>80</sup> as the constitutions guarantee him the right to be heard either by himself,<sup>81</sup> or by counsel,<sup>82</sup> or by both.<sup>83</sup> If he does not desire counsel, the court is not justified in imposing counsel upon him,<sup>84</sup> unless it appear that he is not mentally competent or is not sui juris at the time of the trial.<sup>85</sup> And if, when brought to the bar, he announces himself ready for trial without asking that counsel be assigned him, it will be presumed on appeal that he chose to be heard in his own defense,<sup>86</sup> and a reversal and new trial will not be granted on this ground alone,<sup>87</sup> though this fact will be considered with others in determining whether defendant was accorded a full opportunity for defense.<sup>88</sup>

(III.) Assignment of Counsel.— Courts have inherent power to assign counsel to defend destitute persons accused of serious crimes.<sup>89</sup> Generally, however, the matter is regulated by statutes,<sup>90</sup> which require the court to assign counsel on the request of a defendant unable to employ any,<sup>91</sup> or which require the court to inform the accused before being arraigned, of his right to have counsel, ask him if he desires such aid and assign him counsel if he does.<sup>92</sup> Three things must be found before counsel is assigned: first, that the defendant is without counsel;<sup>93</sup> second, that he is unable to employ counsel,<sup>94</sup> and third, that he has requested or indicated a desire that counsel be appointed for him.<sup>95</sup>

Some statutes limit the right to have counsel appointed to capital cases.<sup>96</sup> In cases not covered by the statute, the matter of appointment rests in the discretion of the court.<sup>97</sup>

When Assignment Made.— A statute providing for the assignment of counsel when the defendant appears for arraignment should not be construed to limit the exercise of the power of appointment to the time of arraignment, but should be construed to authorize the appointment of counsel at any time in the proceeding when essential to give the accused the benefit of his constitutional guaranty.<sup>98</sup>

Who Should Be Assigned.—When called upon to appoint counsel, it is the duty of the court to appoint a person who has been admitted as an attorney and counsellor in the state,<sup>99</sup> and to see that the counsel assigned has sufficient ability and experience to fairly represent the defendant, present his defense and protect him from undue oppression,<sup>1</sup> and that he has no interest adverse to the prisoner which would interfere with a fair presentation of the defense.<sup>2</sup> But unless the statute provides that the court must allow the accused to select counsel,<sup>3</sup> he must be content with such counsel as the court may provide for him.<sup>4</sup>

The number of counsel to be appointed to defend an accused is a matter to be determined by the trial court in the exercise of its sound discretion<sup>5</sup> within the limitations prescribed by statute.<sup>6</sup>

(IV.) Consultation With Counsel.—The right of an accused to be heard by counsel includes the right to a full and confidential consultation with such counsel with no other persons present to hear what is said.<sup>7</sup> It is the duty of officers having the custody of persons charged with stitution of another attorney necessary. So too, it may be necessary to appoint additional counsel to place the accused on something like equality in professional ability and experience, with the forces opposed. Korf v. Jasper County, 132 Iowa 682, 108 N. W. 1031.

(V.) Presence of Counsel. — In criminal cases, it is the defendant's constitutional right to have his counsel present during the trial.<sup>11</sup> But the right to the presence of counsel is in the nature of a personal privilege and may be waived.<sup>12</sup> The court cannot be required to issue process to compel the attendance of counsel,<sup>13</sup> or employ express messengers to send for them,<sup>14</sup> although notice to counsel when absent is sometimes required.<sup>15</sup> Pending the deliberation of the jury, counsel must

[a] Extent of Right. — The fact that an accused has made a statement before the grand jury and the district attorney has agreed to dismiss the case against the accused does not deprive him of his right to the advice of counsel. It is not necessary that the party desiring counsel should be preparing a defense against some accusation after indictment found or after arrest. The statute is broader and fully comprehends every possible situation in which an accused person, or persons under arrest or not under arrest desire to consult with counsel, or communicate with counsel, or obtain advice or services of counsel in the protection of his rights or even supposed legal rights. *Hamilton v. J. ARRANGEMENTS WITHIN COURT ROOM.—The bench, bar, and clerk's box are intended for the officers of the court.<sup>18</sup> Strictly speaking, no person has a right to go into the bar but attorneys,<sup>19</sup> although the ordinary clients of lawyers sit by the side of their counsel by the general acquiescence of the bar.<sup>20</sup> And it has been held proper to permit relatives of the deceased to sit with the attorneys for the prosecution during a homicide trial.<sup>21</sup> The spectators should be confined to that part of the court room set apart to their use.<sup>22</sup> The practice with respect to the place in court of a defendant in a criminal case does not seem to be uniform.<sup>23</sup> In some states a defendant on bail may be allowed to sit just within the bar near his counsel.<sup>24</sup> If in custody, his place is behind the bar within sight of the court.<sup>25</sup> In some jurisdictions, the uniform rule during the trial of felonies is for the prisoner to remain in the prisoner's dock.<sup>26</sup> It has been held that he has a right to sit with his counsel,<sup>27</sup> but a request for permission to do so has been refused.<sup>28</sup>

K. RESTRAINT OF PRISONER.—As a general rule a prisoner should not, during his trial, be manacled or handcuffed; but should be left free from shackles,<sup>29</sup> unless some such restraint is necessary to prevent escape.<sup>30</sup> The matter is largely in the discretion of the court,<sup>31</sup> but shackling should not be permitted under ordinary circumstances, or in any case where the prisoner is not violent and obstreperous or does not threaten to escape.<sup>32</sup> It is not erroneous, however, to conduct the prisoner to and from the court room in shackles and remove the shackles immediately upon arrival there and put them on again upon the eve of returning him to jail.<sup>33</sup>

An armed guard may be permitted to attend the defendant if he is a desperate and dangerous character.<sup>34</sup>

App. 420.

[a] A substantial compliance with the statute is (1) essential (Hendrickson v. Com., 23 Ky. L. Rep. 1191, 64 S. W. 954; Galloway v. Com., 5 Ky. L. Rep. 213) and (2) sufficient. Donehy

v. Com., 170 Ky. 474, 186 S. W. 161; Combs v. Com., 31 Ky. L. Rep. 822, 104 S. W. 270.

[b] A reading by the attorney employed to prosecute, instead of by the clerk or commonwealth's attorney as required by statute, is a substantial compliance with the statute. Galloway v. Com., 5 Ky. L. Rep. 213.

[c] Failure To State Plea.—Where the defendant enters his plea of not guilty in the presence of the jury after the reading of the indictment and before the statement of the prosecuting attorney, a failure to state the defendant's plea is not ground for reversal. Donehy v. Com., 170 Ky. 474, 186 S. W. 161.

[d] The reading of an exact copy of the indictment is a sufficient compliance, where no objection is interposed until after the evidence is closed. Orner v. State, 78 Tex. Crim. 415, 183 S. W. 1172.

[a] But any irregularity in doing so is cured by a rereading of the indictment (1) omitting such counts (Thornton v. Com., 24 Gratt. (65 Va.) 657), or (2) by a correction and direction of the court that the trial would be on the first count only, and an explanation by the court of the nature of the charge in that count. Grottkau v. State, 70 Wis. 462, 36 N. W. 31.

convictions which are admitted by the plea, should be omitted in the reading and not referred to in the trial.<sup>43</sup> Where the indictment contains a number of counts which are alike except as to the amounts and dates, it is sufficient to read the first count and explain to the jury the difference as to the remaining counts.<sup>44</sup> Furthermore, the defendant may waive a reading of the entire indictment.<sup>45</sup> It is sufficient to read the indictment and enter the plea after the case is closed if the evidence is reintroduced,<sup>46</sup> or such reintroduction is waived,<sup>47</sup> but not otherwise.<sup>48</sup>

N. CIVIL TRIALS BY COURT WITHOUT A JURY.—1. In General. When an ordinary action at law is submitted to a court without a jury, the court or judge is clothed with all the functions of a jury in determining the facts and rendering judgment thereon.<sup>49</sup> He acts in the double capacity of judge and jury and may exercise all the powers both of the judge and jury,<sup>50</sup> and in the latter capacity pass upon issues of fact,<sup>51</sup> and the credibility of witnesses,<sup>52</sup> and determine the weight of testimony.<sup>53</sup> But he has no powers in addition to those which the court and jury have in any ordinary case.<sup>54</sup> The same technical rules of evidence controlling trials by jury do not necessarily prevail.<sup>55</sup>

The court may decline to hear oral argument.<sup>56</sup> But it is error to enter judgment upon issues of fact raised by the pleadings without hearing evidence.<sup>57</sup> Findings of fact and conclusions of law are generally required by statute or rule of court.<sup>58</sup>

2. Power To Call Jury Notwithstanding Waiver.—It has been held that the court may call a jury for the trial of a cause though both parties have waived a jury pursuant to constitutional and statutory provisions that the right may be waived in a specified manner.<sup>59</sup>

Trial and Reception of Evidence.—Upon a plea to the complaint or information other than a plea of guilty, if the parties waive a trial by jury,<sup>99</sup> and if an adjournment<sup>1</sup> or change of venue<sup>2</sup> is not granted, the court must proceed to try the case.<sup>3</sup> In fairness to the accused, the state should present its case in the opening,<sup>4</sup> but it is not required to call to the stand any other witnesses than such as the prosecuting officer considers most available for that purpose.<sup>5</sup> Sometimes statutes require that the evidence be taken down in writing.<sup>6</sup> It is discretionary with the judge whether or not he will hear argument of counsel.<sup>7</sup> He need not give instructions.<sup>8</sup> Statutes authorizing the submission of propositions of law to the court when a civil action is tried without a jury,<sup>9</sup> or requiring special findings of fact and conclusions of law,<sup>10</sup> have no application to summary trials of criminal cases.

3 Pa. Co. Ct. 654. Vt.—Sawyer v. Joiner, 16 Vt. 497.

[a] Under such statute it is purely a matter of discretion with the court whether the defendant shall be permitted to answer to the indictment by attorney or by agent without appearing personally. Warren v. State, 19 Ark. 214, 68 Am. Dec. 214. Compare supra, VII, G, 2, b and c.

[a] The trial court is vested with a liberal discretion in this regard. W. T. Wilson Grain Co. v. Fitch (Tex. Civ. App.), 208 S. W. 556.

[b] "The wide discretion of a trial judge in regulating the order in which evidence shall be produced, in permitting the examination of witnesses out of the natural order, in allowing the recall of witnesses and in relieving a party from his error and default in not calling a witness at the proper time is so well established that no authorities need be cited." People v. Ferrone, 204 N. Y. 551, 98 N. E. 8, Ann. Cas. 1913C, 1008.

[c] A liberal practice in this respect is most favorable to the ends of justice. Bigelow v. Young, 30 Ga. 121; Autry v. State (Ga. App.), 99 S. E. 389.

[d] The discharge of all the witnesses for one side after the case has been announced closed, is good ground for refusing to reopen the case on the application of the other party, especially when the salient features of the evidence to be offered appeared in the testimony already given. Bundrick v. State, 125 Ga. 753, 54 S. E. 683; Madrox v. State, 68 Ga. 294; Hendrick v. State, 47 Tex. Crim. 371, 83 S. W. 711. See also State v. Pilegge, 61 Wash. 264, 112 Pac. 263.

[a] Showing Required.—(1) On application to introduce a witness after the testimony is closed, the party must, not only show a sufficient excuse for the failure to introduce the witness before, but also that the testimony would probably produce a verdict different from what it would otherwise be. Haley v. Hickman's Heirs, Litt. Sel. Cas. (Ky.) 266. See also Paducah & E. R. Co. v. Com., 4 Ky. L. Rep. 625. (2) When there is nothing in the affidavit accompanying the application either as to the nature of the evidence sought to be added to what had already been received, or as to the witness by whom it was expected to be given, or as to the reason why they had not been offered sooner, to require the reopening of the case, the motion is properly denied. Alexis v. United States, 129 Fed. 60, 63 C. C. A. 502.

[b] The withdrawal of an announcement that the evidence was closed, without the assignment of a reason therefor, may be permitted. Noft-singer v. State, 7 Tex. App. 301, 321.

at any stage of the proceedings,<sup>17</sup> to enable parties to introduce further proof. As the matter rests in the discretion of the court, its action will not be reversed,<sup>18</sup> unless there is such an abuse of discretion to defeat the ends of justice.<sup>19</sup> If it appear that the proposed testimony is of any substantial importance to a party,<sup>20</sup> or if it appear that it is necessary to a due administration of justice,<sup>21</sup> the application should be granted. But if the party knew of and had an opportunity to introduce the evidence before submission the application may be denied.<sup>22</sup>

Particular Stage of Proceedings.—The stage of the case at which it may be opened for additional evidence is sometimes prescribed by statute.<sup>23</sup> In the absence of statute, however, it is within the discretion of the court whether to reopen a case for additional evidence, after a party has rested his case,<sup>24</sup> after pending a motion for nonsuit or similar objection made,<sup>25</sup> or after the close of the evidence and be-

[a] In Texas, (1) the code of criminal procedure provides that the court may allow testimony to be introduced at any time before argument is concluded, if he deems it necessary to the due administration of office. Johnson v. State, 67 Tex. Crim. 441, 149 S. W. 165. (2) The statute makes no distinction between an argument to the court and an argument to the jury after the testimony is closed. In either case it is reversible error to permit further proof after the conclusion of the argument. Lockett v. State (Tex. Crim.), 55 S. W. 336. (3) The only exception to this rule is the one provided by the statute which permits the jury, after its retirement, to have a witness re-examined. Williams v. State, 35 Tex. Crim. 183, 32 S. W. 893. As to reexamination of witnesses and evidence after retirement of jury, see 17 STANDARD PROC. 578.

[a] It is common practice to allow the case to be reopened to prevent a nonsuit where counsel has omitted evidence by accident, inadvertence or even because of a mistake as to the necessity of offering a particular witness or evidence. Penn v. Georgia S. & F. Ry. Co., 129 Ga. 856, 60 S. E. 172; Ellenberg v. Southern Ry. Co., 5 Ga. App. 389, 63 S. E. 240.

[b] It is almost a matter of course to let in new evidence on a point to save a nonsuit. McColgan v. McKay, 25 Ga. 631.

[c] Until the court signs the order granting a nonsuit, (1) it is not too late to move to reopen the case for further testimony. Moore v. Dixie F. Ins. Co., 19 Ga. App. 800, 92 S. E. 302. (2) After the court announces that it will grant the motion for nonsuit and before he signs the order, it can reopen the case. Penn v. Georgia S. & F. Ry. Co., 129 Ga. 856, 60 S. E. 172.

to one party and close it to the other.<sup>34</sup> The court may allow a witness to be recalled to explain, correct or restate his former testimony,<sup>35</sup> or to be examined as to new matter.<sup>36</sup> The introduction of new evidence is permitted by some authorities, for good cause shown, even after submission of the case to the jury,<sup>37</sup> but others limit the evidence at this stage to a re-examination of witnesses as to matter already testified to or to a re-reading of the testimony.<sup>38</sup>

R. CONDUCT OF JUDGE. — 1. In General. — The average juror is prone to attach great weight to the convictions of the presiding judge as to the rights of litigants. Consequently the judge should, during a trial, avoid indicating what his convictions are. He should refrain from any manifestation of partiality, or from any unnecessary remarks which might tend to prejudice any litigant or to influence the jury.<sup>39</sup> He should not make remarks which may mislead the jury as to the law applicable to the case,<sup>40</sup> nor should he express or intimate his opinion upon any disputed facts,<sup>41</sup> or upon the guilt of the

[a] Statute Applied.—The arrest of a witness for perjury at the instance of the judge is not within the purview of a statute providing that "in his charge to the jury, the judge shall not state or repeat the testimony of any witness, nor shall he give any opinion as to what facts have been proved or disproved." State v. Strado, 38 La. Ann. 562.

or civil action, as an indication of the court's opinion upon the credibility of the witness.<sup>71</sup>

6. Effect of Misconduct and Cure. — Misconduct of the court may be ground for new trial,<sup>72</sup> or for reversal if prejudicial.<sup>73</sup> If it does not appear that the remarks of the court were heard by the jury, there is no reversible error.<sup>74</sup> Instructions directing the jury to disregard the improper remarks made in their hearing,<sup>75</sup> or may not<sup>76</sup> correct the irregularity, depending upon the character of the misconduct.<sup>77</sup>

[a] Ordinarily an admonition of the trial judge to the jury to disregard misconduct of either the judge or district attorney will, in the absence of an affirmative showing of injury, suffice to remove any prejudice therefrom in the minds of the jury. The rule in this behalf is founded upon the presumption that the jury will heed the admonition of the trial judge. But this presumption does not prevail when the misconduct of the judge is in its very nature calculated to weaken, if not utterly destroy, a legitimate and substantial defense apparently interposed in "good faith." People v. Pitisci, 29 Cal. App. 727, 735, 157 Pac. 502.

S. CONDUCT OF JURY.—Matters relating to the conduct of the jury are elsewhere discussed.<sup>78</sup>

T. CONDUCT OF PARTIES.—When the misconduct of a party is brought to the attention of the court, it may investigate the matter in the presence of the jury,<sup>79</sup> although a private examination out of the hearing of the jury is ordinarily, at least in the first instance, a preferable course.<sup>80</sup> Instead of objecting immediately to the misconduct of a party, the adverse party may wait until after verdict and seek to remedy the wrong by motion for new trial.<sup>81</sup> But misconduct of a party is not ground for reversal if not prejudicial.<sup>82</sup>

U. CONDUCT OF COUNSEL.—An attorney is an officer of the court, and it is his duty to uphold its honor and dignity.<sup>83</sup> It is his duty to abstain from all offensive personality, to maintain the respect that is due to the court,<sup>84</sup> and not to resort to sharp practice.<sup>85</sup>

It is the duty of the prosecuting attorney in a criminal prosecution to refrain from conduct infringing the accused's right to a fair trial.<sup>86</sup> He owes a duty to the accused as well as to the state, and should not endeavor to exclude competent evidence,<sup>87</sup> or to introduce that of doubtful competency.<sup>88</sup> He should not indulge in abuse of the defendant,<sup>89</sup> or make baseless insinuations against his witnesses,<sup>90</sup>

[a] Limitation on Rule.—While the prosecuting attorney should see that no unfair advantage is taken of the accused, yet he is not a judicial officer. He is necessarily a partisan in the case. If he were compelled to proceed with the same circumspection as the judge and jury, the conviction of criminals would be at an end. Zeal in the prosecution of criminal cases is therefore to be commended. It is zeal of the counsel in the courtroom alone, of which the accused can complain. State v. Kent, 4 N. D. 577, 62 N. or act disrespectfully toward opposing counsel.<sup>91</sup> He should guard against anything that would prejudice the minds of the jurors, and tend to hinder them from considering only the evidence introduced.<sup>92</sup>

Misconduct of counsel is ground for new trial,<sup>93</sup> and for reversal.<sup>94</sup> And the attorney may be punished by fine as for contempt.<sup>95</sup>

V. CONDUCT OF BYSTANDERS.—Courts should use every precaution, during the trial of a case, to prevent any utterance, demonstration, or other act, by the public or individual bystanders, which would tend to influence the minds of the jurors either for or against a party.<sup>96</sup> Where prejudice is shown as a result of a demonstration or misconduct of spectators a new trial should be granted,<sup>97</sup> but where there is no prejudice shown,<sup>98</sup> as well as when the improper action is of such a nature as to preclude the effect of prejudice resulting therefrom, a new trial should be denied.<sup>99</sup> The presence of a large number of persons in the court room known to bear malice against a party is ground for a new trial where it is evident that he was prejudiced thereby,<sup>1</sup> but not otherwise.<sup>2</sup> As a general rule, where it appears that the person or persons guilty of misconduct in the presence of the jury were at once reprimanded by the court and the jurors instructed to disregard the incident and not permit it to influence them, a mistrial will not result.<sup>3</sup> Moreover, if the act is not noticed by the court,<sup>4</sup> or if disregarded by the court and no objection is made,<sup>5</sup> it is not ground for a new trial; but when the misconduct is perceived by the court it should at once act to prevent any prejudice resulting therefrom.<sup>6</sup> It is not error to refuse to declare a mistrial because a relative of one of the parties faints during the course of the trial,<sup>7</sup> or indulges in weeping and other manifestations of grief.<sup>8</sup>

Excluding Spectators.—The court, in the exercise of its discretion, and for the purpose of obtaining a fair trial for all parties, may order the court room cleared of spectators or of certain individuals, upon a demonstration by the public,<sup>9</sup> or in case of the presence of a hostile

W. MISTRIAL AND NEW TRIAL. — Mistrial. — A mistrial is a trial which is nugatory trial by reason of a failure of the jury to agree upon a verdict, or by reason of some error or defect in the proceedings.<sup>13</sup> It is largely in the discretion of the trial court,<sup>14</sup> except perhaps in capital cases,<sup>15</sup> when and under what circumstances it will declare a mistrial. Whenever a verdict is set aside, or the jury disagree, or a mistrial is declared, the cause is restored to the status it had before any trial took place.<sup>16</sup> The trial must be begun de novo;<sup>17</sup>

[a] Definitions and Illustrations.

(1) A mistrial is "an erroneous, invalid, or nugatory trial; a trial of an action which cannot stand in law because of want of jurisdiction, or a wrong drawing of jurors, or disregard of some other fundamental requisite." Black's L. Dict. 785. (2) It is "a trial legally of no effect by reason of some error in the proceedings; loosely, any trial not resulting in a lawful decision or verdict." Webster's New Int. Dict. 1384. (3) A mistrial has been defined to be an erroneous trial on account of some defect in the persons trying, as if the jury come from the wrong county; or because there was no issue formed, as if no plea be entered, etc. Wilbridge v. Case, 2 Ind. 36, quoting Bouv. L. Dict. (4) "Where a jury is discharged without a verdict, the proceeding is properly known as a mistrial; and where a verdict is set aside because it ought not to stand, the result is the same. The proceeding has miscarried, and the consequence is not a trial but a mistrial." Fisk v. Henarie, 32 Fed. 417, 427.

[b] A mistrial is a nugatory trial, whereas a new trial recognizes a completed trial which for sufficient reason has been set aside so that the issues may be litigated de novo. Stern v. Wabash R. Co., 52 Misc. 12, 101 N. Y. Supp. 181.

[c] A trial of a cause upon a theory outside of any issue formed by the pleadings is a mistrial, and cannot be sustained by an appellate court, except, perhaps, in a case in which a palpably just conclusion is reached on the real merits of the cause. Indiana B. & W. Ry. Co. v. Quick, 109 Ind. 295, 9 N. E. 788, 925.

[d] Where there is no general verdict, and the jury's answer to specific questions do not cover all the facts in issue, there is a mistrial requiring a reversal of the judgment. Ward v. Gradin, 15 N. D. 649, 658, 109 N. W. 57, per Young, J., concurring.
